Rated The #1 Tasting Vodka In The World.

In 1998, the Beverage Testing Institute of Chicago conducted a blind taste test of more than 40 vodkas. They awarded points based on smoothness, nose, and most importantly, taste. Of all the vodkas, Grey Goose® Vodka emerged victorious, receiving 96 points out of a possible 100.

Founded in 1981, the Beverage Testing Institute conducts tests in a specially designed lab that minimizes external factors and maximizes panelists' concentration. The Institute selects judges based on their expertise, and its tasting and scoring procedures are widely praised as the best in the industry.

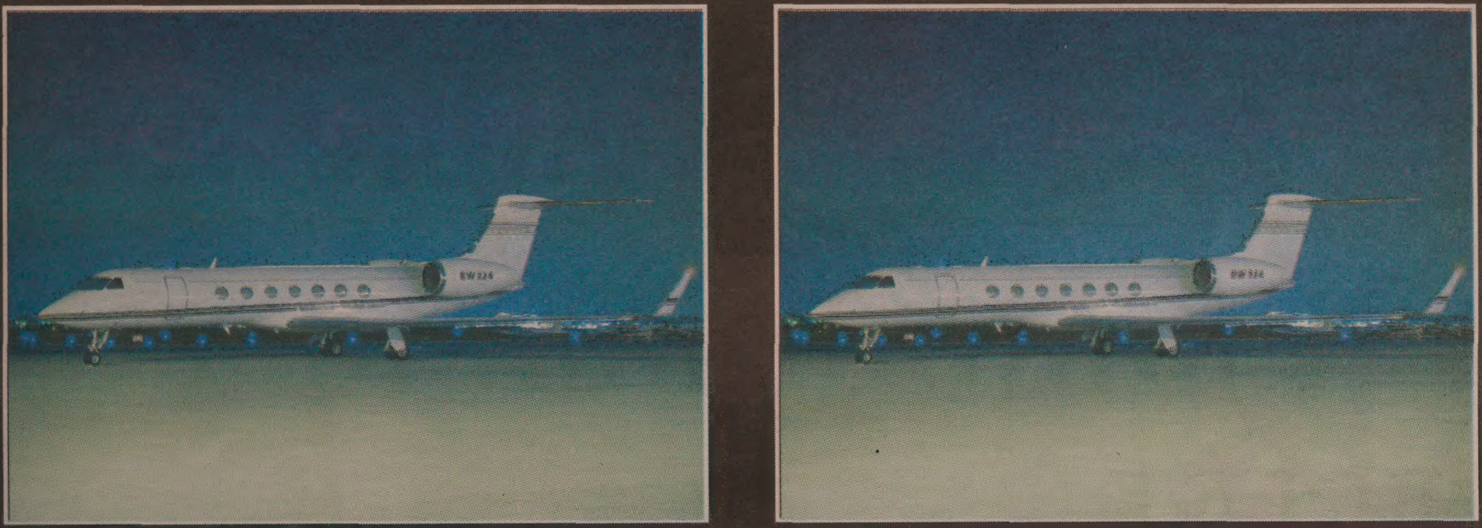
The secret is out.



Can you see the difference?

There's only one. It's in your wallet. For years the aviation industry has used CharterAuction.com™ to locate the highest quality aircraft at the most competitive rates. Finally the public has the opportunity to obtain these same wholesale prices at CharterAuction.com™. By using the world's largest database of available jets CharterAuction.com™ can locate planes sitting idle or flying empty which can mean savings of up to 50% or more over fractional providers, private jet membership programs or retail charter brokers. CharterAuction.com's™ unique auction system allows us to utilize the same pool of aircraft other companies fly at a fraction of the cost. Call us toll free at 800-370-7719 (Int'l 617-471-5531) or for more information visit us at www.charterauction.com

"Hairspray"
Broadway Matinee
Wed., June 11th
$160 pp.

Jack O'Brien directed this musical that is set in Baltimore in 1962. Hairspray is the story of plain-jane Tracy Turnblad, who is going to do whatever it takes to dance her way onto TV's most popular show. Can a big girl with big dreams — and even bigger hair — turn the whole town around? Hairspray The Musical is based on John Water's 1988 film classic. Starring Marissa Jaret Winokur and Harvey Fierstein. Package includes Mezzanine ticket, lunch at UN Delegates Dining room and round-trip transportation.

Package Includes: round-trip transportation, Clubhouse admission, racing program and a buffet lunch at the Garden Terrace restaurant overlooking the track. This is a fabulous deal. Dress is semi-formal: jackets for men; dresses, skirts or pantsuits for ladies.

"Gypsy"
Broadway Matinee
Wed., July 16th
$150 pp.

A consummate show-biz musical suggested by the memoirs of stripper Gypsy Rose Lee, who was once plain old Louise, the awkward daughter of an unstoppable stage mother and sister to "Dainty June," a star child of a minor vaudeville circuit. Score includes "Some People," "Let Me Entertain You," "Together," "Everything's Coming Up Roses," and "All I Need Is The Girl." It stars Bernadette Peters. Package includes orchestra ticket, lunch at B. Smith's and round-trip transportation.

NY Yankees Vs. Cleveland Indians

"We Go The Distance For You"

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

The Sound Of The Changing Of The Season Here Was Deafening

By Dan Rattiner

Did you hear the new season hit the East End last week? One minute it was winter, with the wind howling, the snow crackling under your feet and the sound of sirens whining as police and ambulances headed for traffic accidents where the cars had skidded out of control on the ice.

> There was a tremendous uncrumpling sound... as everywhere throughout the East End, under a warming sun, leaves began unfolding...

The next minute, it was summer. The change began just after dawn on the warm morning of May 15, a Thursday, and the sound of it was almost deafening. There was a tremendous uncrumpling sound — that's the only word for it — as everywhere throughout the East End, under a warming sun, leaves began unfolding from the branches of the trees and shrubs. Some said the sound was a kind of rustling noise, the kind you hear when you open a birthday present and rummage around through the wrapping paper. But others said that sort of sound didn't come until that evening, when the wind picked up and the leaves began shaking and quivering in the breeze.

Around eleven in the morning, the uncrumpling sound seemed to subside a bit — practically all the brown and gray of the tree branches had been transformed into the lush soft greens of the new season — and popping began. There were just a few pops at first. But then there were more and more of them until around midday, when the sound was at its worst, and you could barely hear yourself think.

It was a mystery sound at first, but soon it was quite obvious what was going on. Buds everywhere were springing open into great colorful flowers, each pop bringing a new spray of pink, white, red, or yellow. As these buds sprang open, they made a noise like a gunshot or, as some people said, like the sound of popcorn cooking in the microwave, only much, much louder.

Both Southampton Hospital and Central Suffolk in Riverhead were soon overwhelmed with people coming to the emergency rooms at that time — this was between two and three — seeking aspirin or Tylenol or Advil or Excedrin or anything to try and ease the ringing in their ears, and they were not turned away. The nurses at first could not hear what they were saying, but after a few patients were able to write things down, they understood. Medicines were quickly dispensed, and when they ran out, the nurses dispensed bits of cotton for the ears. People went away satisfied.

Sometime after five, the popping sounds decreased in frequency and the wind sprang up. It often had been doing that in recent months, rattling doors and windows and finding cracks in the walls to sneak through. People would shiver from the draft of it and build fires in their fireplaces but sometimes the wind would be so bad it would gust down the chimneys, sending soot into rooms and setting off smoke alarms. People feared the wind.

Now, it sprang up warm and gentle and just rustled through the leaves on the trees. It

Beastie Boys And Radiohead Fans May Have To Wait For Another Day

By Dan Rattiner

As you probably know, there are going to be two huge weekend-long rock concerts this summer, both in Riverhead Town, both bringing in in the neighborhood of 50,000 concert goers to a long-abandoned private airport runway in Calverton that used to be used by Grumman. The first one is scheduled for this weekend, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 6-8, and will feature about 20 name bands headlined by the Beastie Boys and Radiohead. People are expected to camp on the site. Cost of a ticket is about $150 for the weekend.

> Now, just this once, or twice, it is the central islander's turn to get some economic benefits from the city people.

The second concert is similar to the first as a camping out experience but will be three days long instead of two, and will take place August 8-10, featuring Tom Petty, The Dead and Bob Dylan among its many rock groups. It too is scheduled for this airport runway, which is henceforth to be known as Woodstock East, but which is really known, since the airport closed down, as the Riverhead Economic Zone. This is just north of Exit 71 on the Long Island Expressway just before that superhighway ends and there has been lots written about the fact that there are fifteen big weekends in the summer on the East End and here are two of them where traffic will be backed up as far as the eye can see for a period of time that will boggle the mind. There will be the traffic jam of people coming from the city to their vacation homes out east those weekends. And there will be the traffic jam coming from the city to the concerts in Calverton.

About a month ago, this newspaper lamented the fact that people may be unable or unwilling to try to come out east during those two weekends because of these Woodstock-type concerts. But after I wrote that article I had second thoughts. If you turn the article upside down what you get is this kind of high unemployment middle of the island area that fifteen weeks of the year, as long as anybody can remember, resembles a doormat as city folk flood eastward to their summer homes in the Hamptons and on the North Fork on a

Friday and then flood back to the city on Sunday evening.

Now, just this once, or twice, it is the central islander's turn to get some economic benefits from the city people. It has been the East End that has been rude all these years encouraging the doormat situation every weekend of the summer. Not those blue-collar, central islanders who are being rude just this once or twice by having an attraction of their own to bring people to. Maybe the East End would just like a breather.

Then again, maybe not. The plans for this big concert this weekend have been plugging along. Permits for the event were gotten from the Town of Riverhead. They were supposed to be final permits, sort of. All that is needed after that is for the promoters of the concert to show, two days before they open the gates, that everything is in place health and safety wise — traffic control, running water, sewage, clean up and so forth — and then Suffolk County issues a Health Department permit.

Well, Suffolk County apparently is not going to be issuing any final permits. As of Tuesday evening, June 3, there had been no application from the promoter for the County Permit, and in fact the County does not even have a Health Department meeting scheduled between Thursday, before Thursday, June 5. Whether there is an okay given for running water, sewage and clean up remains to be seen, but the first order of the day, traffic, is not being dealt with. To do that, the promoters would have to get the Suffolk County Police together with the Riverhead Town Police to coordinate efforts and, for a time, even arrange for the loaning of police officers from the County to the Town. The Chief of the County Police Department says it is now too late to make this coordination happen. And therefore it will not happen. The County Police have already received all their assignments for this weekend and that will not change.

As things stand now, the promoter of the concert has been running around trying to make other arrangements with other police departments, but they could not get police officers from Southampton, East Hampton, or Southold Towns because, no matter what, this is expected to be a busy summer weekend. As for getting help from police departments further west or even upstate, that has not happened either. The situation looks grim. Or great. Depending upon your point of view.

Also, there was a big lawsuit filed against the concert promoters and the Town of Riverhead. It was filed by an environmental group called the Long Island Pine Barrens Society which, probably quite correctly, has surmised that 75,000 happy fun-loving visitors at a rock concert are probably going to trample everything in sight and this is going to include the rare grasshopper sparrow, which lays eggs in the field where and when the concert is scheduled to take place and at the very time the concert takes place. Although a judge threw out this lawsuit on Friday, it certainly had an effect on the government in Riverhead. On Tuesday night they held a hearing to reconsider this matter. As they have delayed their decision until tomorrow, it is past our deadline, but no matter what they decide, the matter of County approval remains. And the promoter still does not have enough police officers.

All of this just may do in the promoter of this first concert, a young man named Andrew Dreskin, who stands to lose about $5 million, he says, which is the money he seemed to inspire the millions of birds and bees that had suddenly arrived from somewhere and who now, though puzzled, began chirping and buzzing. Spring is here. Summer is here. The woods and forests are thick with greenery to camouflage our nests and hives and burrows. We must start right away. Next week, the last week in June, the summer homeowners arrive in their Benzes and Navigators. There shall be the comforting thwock of tennis balls and the happy laughter of small children finished with school.

And of course, there will be the sound of the ocean crashing on the shore, the sea gulls cawing and the clanking of ropes on the aluminum masts of boats tied fast in their harbor slips. •

Ambulance

Drama Unfolds Outside The Window Of The Hampton Jitney In Manhattan

By Dan Rattiner

So I have just boarded the Hampton Jitney at 40th Street for the trip out to Bridgehampton. It is ten minutes to ten in the morning. We leave in ten minutes. I find myself a seat and sit down.

People don't talk to each other much on the Jitney. They read. They work on business papers. The sense of quiet on the Jitney as we wait to leave is only accompanied by the occasional wail of an ambulance as it weaves through traffic going up Third Avenue. Here on the Jitney, the steward and driver are up front waiting for the last-minute passengers. All is right with the world.

And then, a collective groan comes up from the people on board. I look up from my New York Times. A half-block up Third Avenue, in full view of everyone on the Jitney, a Ford Explorer has pulled out of a parking space and has come to a halt impaled into the side of a New York Presbyterian Hospital ambulance. Apparently I missed hearing the crunching.

"Oh boy," our bus driver says.

"How could he do that?" the steward asks.

We are all peering out the window now. From what I can see, it is just a fender bender. But the ambulance, its lights flashing, its siren sounding, a vehicle clearly going someplace and we-have-to-hurry-and-you-better-get-out-of-the-way is now stopped. This other vehicle remains impaled in its right quarter panel.

My thoughts turn to whoever it is laying on a stretcher inside. Perhaps he is a heart attack victim, tubes sticking out of him, the paramedics working feverishly over him, one performing artificial respiration, another attaching an oxygen tube under his nose. It's a race against time.

Or is it?

Traffic has backed up behind the accident. In New York, you don't leave it that way. And so the Ford Explorer backs up a foot and because the Explorer is no longer impaled, the ambulance lowers back down to the right to rock a little bit on its springs until it settles down. Must be playing havoc with some of those wires and tubes, I thought.

He is a heart attack victim, tubes sticking out of him... It is a race against time. Or is it?

Now the ambulance pulls over to park in the parking space in front of the Explorer and the traffic is again on the move.

"How could the guy possibly run into him like that?" the stewardess asks the driver. "Didn't he hear the siren? Couldn't he see all the flashing lights?" The lights are still flashing.

The Jitney passengers are now talking to one another about the accident. Meanwhile, outside, the ambulance driver has gotten out with the license and registration and has walked over to the Explorer driver's side window. They are going to exchange accident information. The siren continues to wail, the lights continue to flash.

I am thinking, the guy on the stretcher will breathe his last unless something is done. But what? Another ambulance along in a moment? What are the procedures to follow here? What are the ambulance's priorities?

After awhile a police car pulls up and parks in front of the ambulance. The officer walks over. Then the door at the back of the ambulance opens. I can't wait to see this. It is a paramedic, carrying a white bag. He hops down, walks to the sidewalk and commences to walk uptown with it.

New York Presbyterian is on 168th Street. The back door, which the paramedic has opened, remains open. You figure it out. All I know is that warm, fuzzy feeling I get when I see an ambulance go by with all the sirens on, with the image of someone's life being saved inside, is now on hold. I will no longer think There But for the Grace of God Go I. I will think maybe it's just hot coffee. •

JAPSY LOCKETT SEARS, 1904-2003

Japsy Lockett Sears, one of the last surviving "Grand Ladies of Quogue," died at her home on May 25, one month shy of her 100th birthday.

Mrs. Sears was the daughter of Arthur and Antoinette Lockett, who built a house in Quogue in the early 1900s. During the Hurricane of 1938, while she was pregnant with her son Jay, Japsy and her one-year old son Peter were rescued from the second floor of their home by Ed Payne in his rowboat.

A professional dancer, Mrs. Sears trained under Martha Graham and Jerome Robbins. She performed regularly as part of the Quogue Quips revues at the Quogue field club and was also a writer, choreographer, devoted horseback rider, and championship swimmer.

In her later years, Japsy devoted much of her time to the rescue of stray animals, working with local shelters and the police. She passed on this desire to help others to her son Jay, a Quogue resident who has established a Mission of Kindness, reaching out to children, and to the less fortunate.

Mrs. Sears is survived by her two sons, Peters Sears and Jay Lockett Sears, daughter Missy Baris, and grandchildren River Sears and Andrew Baris. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Bide-A-Wee Home Association, 118 Old Country Road, Westhampton, New York 11977. A memorial service to celebrate her life will be held in July.

Dan S. Papers Is Now A Temporary Member of AARP

By Dan Rattiner

Should Dan's Papers join the American Association of Retired Persons? Last week, we received in the mail an invitation to do just that. WELCOME TO THE AARP! the letter said. There was a little blue membership card signed by William Novelli, Executive Director. We would be member number 459963729-7. All we had to do was mail in $21 for a two-year membership and we could get all these benefits.

"Dear Dan S. Papers. I am pleased to enclose your AARP Membership Registration and temporary membership card," his letter said. "You need only return the Registration and the dues and you will receive your complete Membership Kit and permanent membership card within 6 weeks."

Benefits of the AARP include tips on grandparenting, retirement, investments, pharmacy services, Social Security medical and pension rights, volunteering and promoting laws against age bias.

"Your admission TO AARP membership is guaranteed as long as you are 50 or over, whether you are working or retired," the letter concluded.

Well, Dan S. Papers is not fifty years old, although it is getting up there. It is 43 years old, having been founded in Montauk by this reporter in 1960 and is the first free resort newspaper in America. We've had that slogan on our masthead inside the paper, and it has gone unchallenged for all these years. So maybe the AARP is cutting us a deal to sneak us in ahead of time? Certainly it is unusual for a newspaper to be founded and be under the same editor and publisher for 43 years. When it got to be 35 years old, I got a letter of congratulation from President William Clinton about the achievement. At 40, I received a lifetime achievement FOLIO award from the Long Island Association of Broadcasters. And now at 43 I have been asked, or at least Dan S. Papers has been asked, to join the American Association of Retired Persons.

> "Dear Dan S. Papers. I am pleased to enclose your AARP Membership Registration and temporary membership card..."

Who is Dan S. Papers, anyway? It would seem, to any rational person, to be the name of the newspaper, mixed up in some postal computer. But maybe it is something else. Maybe there IS a Dan S. Papers somewhere and they just sent it to the wrong address. Dan S. Papers, a hardworking American, now fifty, is being passed over for membership unless I do something about it.

Or perhaps Dan S. Papers is some sort of vapor or muse, born in 1953 during the Eisenhower Administration, who pre-dated this newspaper by seven years, at which time it stepped forward in some spooky way to oversee the birth of this newspaper and guide it along from that day to this.

Or maybe my real name is Dan S. Papers. And I really am fifty years old, which I am not, and this is just some big joke on you.

So this is a call to our vast readership, 150,000 strong, that if anybody knows if this is me or a vapor or a fellow named Dan who also is known as Mr. Papers and who is just turning fifty years old, I have a deal waiting for you. Just call 631-537-0500, but speak up because I can be a little hard of hearing sometimes. •

MARTHA STEWART INDICTMENT IS IMMINENT

By Dan Rattiner

Lawyers for Martha Stewart of East Hampton have told the board of directors of her company that they think the U.S. Attorney will approach a grand jury to secure a criminal indictment against her in the near future. If charged, it will be for insider trading or obstruction of justice in the ImClone Systems case.

Ms. Stewart had owned about a quarter million dollars worth of stock in a firm called ImClone founded and run by her friend, Dr. Sam Waksal of Wainscott. ImClone was developing a cancer drug called Erbitrex, and the stock for ImClone was trading in the mid-sixties. This was in December 2001. But then, Waksal had learned, privately, that the FDA was not going to approve the drug because the testing to show its potency had failed to follow proper procedures. A few days before the FDA would announce that publically, Waksal told his family to unload the stock they owned so they could bail out. He also spoke to Stewart, though what was said is unknown. In any case, Stewart too bailed out the next day. And shortly after that, the stock tanked, Waksal was arrested and convicted of insider trading. He will be sentenced on June 10.

As for Stewart, she has always maintained that her broker had standing orders from her to sell if the stock lowered to sixty. Apparently, however, there is nothing in writing to that effect. Her broker says that was the case. An assistant to the broker says he was told it was not the case and has turned state's evidence. That is where the matter rests.

The stock Martha Stewart Living, which was trading as high as $23 at that time gave Stewart a stake worth $650 million. After the ImClone scandal broke, however, the stock sank to as low as $5, an amount it traded at last October after Ms. Stewart resigned her seat on the New York Stock Exchange. At that time, lawyers for Ms. Stewart said that the ImClone scandal had probably cost her $400 million during that eighteen-month period. Since then, the stock has climbed back to $9, restoring about $100 million to her net worth.

Waksal, meanwhile, about to be sentenced, has got to be heartened by a new study about the Erbitrex cancer drug that has just been released in Europe. It confirms everything reported in the earlier discredited study, and this time, it has earned an approval for use in Europe. Officials at ImClone, which is still in business, are now preparing papers to ask the FDA to reconsider their ruling in light of this new study.

The drug, incidentally, is not a cure for cancer, and was never intended to be. What it does do is slow down the course of certain cancers, allowing patients with terminal cancer, who were those studied in this case, to live longer. The increase averaged about six months longer for people with advanced colon cancer who had been given just a year to live. More approved uses for the drug remain to be found.

Lawyers for Sam Waksal are probably going to ask that his sentence, which involved various misuses of corporate funds as well as insider trading, be reduced because of all the good the drug he was developing is about to do in the world. They may have a good case. Waksal is facing seven years in prison.

Waksal owns two homes in Wainscott, one on Main Street and one oceanfront and when the scandal broke, he put both of them up for sale. So far, neither has sold.

Martha Stewart also owns two homes out here, both in East Hampton, one on Georgica Pond and one on Lily Pond Lane. She recently put the property on Georgica Pond, including a home on the property designed by Gordon Bunshaft, up for sale for $12.5 million.

Stock in ImClone — and Sam Waksal still owns several million dollars worth of it — has begun climbing on the news of the recent acceptance of Erbitux in Europe. Waksal, about to go to prison, is probably $2 million richer on paper than he was a month ago. •

Can He Finish It?

Industrialist Ira Rennert Reportedly Is In Deep Financial Trouble

By Dan Rattiner

In the July issue of Vanity Fair, coming out next week, there is to be an article about the faltering fortunes of one of the richest men in America, Ira Rennert, and how the great palace he is building for himself in Sagaponack may not be able to be completed.

This is the trouble with building big like this. Spend four years and a hundred million or more on your vacation home and who knows? With the vagaries of the economy, of life in general and of the way the world turns, all you need is one bad year and, poof, what was to be the crowning glory of your career and the very pinnacle of human achievement turns out to be an unfinished ruin. It's happened before. Vanity Fair is suggesting that it is about to happen again.

The straw that seems to be breaking the camel's back is a $900 million lawsuit filed by the Environmental Protection Agency...

The straw that seems to be breaking the camel's back is a $900 million lawsuit filed by the Environmental Protection Agency against Mr. Rennert for environmental damage caused by one of his mining operations. This is a very big straw. And though Rennert, with many factories and businesses in his web of financial success, is indeed a very big camel. Nevertheless, we live in uncertain times. It is hard to say, because Mr. Rennert is a very private man, whether there is any truth to this Vanity Fair report.

In any case, here is the case that the writer for Vanity Fair makes.

There are a group of factories that, through a complicated number of related corporations, all turn out to be part of a private firm called the Renco Group, which has one single stockholder, Ira Rennert. Renco consists of a wide variety of businesses, many of them mines or mills, including one called the Magnesium Corporation of America — or it WAS called the Magnesium Corporation of America. This is the business that the EPA has now sued for $900 million for environmental damage. In response to it, the Magnesium Corporation of America was sold for a very small sum to another corporation called MagCorp, which is also owned in full by Ira Rennert. The name change is supposed to get away from the

CUPID FIRES HIS ARROW AT TRED BARTA

By Dan Rattiner

There are two men in the Hamptons that everyone wishes would get married. One is Billy Joel, the rock star, who has talked about loneliness in several recent interviews. The problem is, if you can call it a problem, that he is surely one of the most talented men ever to write music, he is funny, down to earth, smart and witty and that he would be lonely is the last thing that he deserves on this planet. In an article in The New York Times Magazine not long ago, he talked about it and after it was published he reportedly received about a hundred letters from women who wanted to marry him. Everybody is rooting for Billy Joel.

The other individual that everybody wishes would get married is Tred Barta, 51, an outdoorsman who lives in Southampton who recently had his longtime marriage fall apart and who advertised for a new mate. Here is what he wrote in an ad in several newspapers last fall.

THE OPPORTUNITY OF A LIFETIME

For the right woman. An unmitigated nightmare for most.

Divorced, 50, 193 pounds of blue twisted steel. Lives in Southampton on 3 acres with 12-year-old son. I own my own company, buying and selling corporate aircraft, and am a prolific outdoor writer and author.

Seeking an in-shape, athletic woman who loves the untamed wild and will join me on rugged outdoor excursions.

My entire life is spent big game hunting and offshore sportfishing worldwide. When not hunting or fishing I am preparing to go hunting or fishing.

The truth of the matter is I love the East End of Long Island, the wilds of Alaska and British Columbia and the blue water of the ocean beyond the horizon.

If you want to go to New York City, it better be for a funeral. No golf, no opera, no badminton, no sailing, no art exhibits or museums, no liberal causes, very few candlelit dinners. If this is what you're after, don't waste your time.

But if you like plenty of fresh yellowfin tuna and venison on the grill, firehouse spaghetti dinner fundraisers, a house decorated with mounted game and wildlife artwork, international travel and sunrises at sea with no land in sight, I'm your man.

In 17 years of marriage I never had an affair. We are talking about a rock solid loyal man. My prospect of the big fine, apparently.

As for the other holdings in Renco, the author of this article, Michael Shnayerson, says that a very high percentage of them have either gone bankrupt or are teetering on the brink of bankruptcy, with the investors taking the beating while Rennert escapes. Rennert was 64 when he got his approvals to build what is believed to be — if finished — the largest single private residence in America, a 110,000 square foot affair with 29 bedrooms and 43 bathrooms, just to the east of Peter's Pond Lane on the ocean at Sagaponack.

"If the house is at last done," Schnayerson asks, "how long will its master live there? Rennert is nearly 70 now, a short heavy figure who walks slowly."

This kind of argues that if you are going to build something like this, you should start younger and maybe have the whole thing prefabbed somewhere else ahead of time and then brought in. Plop. Not here on Tuesday. Here on Wednesday. All paid for in cash.

The real issue, however, if the above is true, is what this will mean for the Village of Sagaponack. Here is a community of half a dozen large potato farms and maybe 500 10-bedroom and 6-bath summer homes that has been pretty much torn up in recent years by big giant trucks bringing in the material to build this enormous palace down at the beach.

Some would say that Rennert's house under construction is a gaudy monstrous piece of architecture but anyone going down to look it over, now that it is almost done, would not agree with that. It is a giant Italian palazzo, fit for a duke or a baron, except it is much larger than that — Buckingham Palace would fit easily inside it — and the detailing of it is quite handsome and in proportion with palazzos of that sort.

Trouble is is it's a palazzo of that sort. You don't see very many of them in a small farming and residential community anywhere. What was this man thinking?

Well, if the story is true and if Rennert sadly has to pull the plug on this dream, it will be a major economic setback for the hundreds of workmen who have labored so long and so hard on this. What do we do?

1. Fundraiser: A good marketing firm could turn the situation upside down and present Ira Rennert as a hero to the local blue collar community. It took four years, but he got 80% of the place done. Let's have a benefit for him. A tent. Cocktails. Dinner at $200,000 a couple. Black tie. Bring him in on a throne waving to the crowd. Raise that last 20% for the man.

2. Demolition: A couple of hundred well-placed charges could bring this palazzo down in about twenty seconds. I recall some people in Florida sold the rights to the blowing up of a mansion there to the James Bond movie people. Made a good penny. Barge the former Rennert estate as concrete rap out to sea and dump it to make a good underwater fishing reef.

3. Conversion: People say they think that secretly Ira Rennert is building this place as a religious institution. Nonsense. It's a health spa. The facilities here include indoor and outdoor swimming pools, lecture halls, movie theaters, game rooms, dining rooms, beach house, tennis courts, indoor parking garage. There are plenty of other rich people living in those large homes in Sagaponack next to the farmland. Throw in Yoga and a few massage rooms and there is no ques-

New School

A New Applied Arts Institute Opens In Amagansett Next Week

By Leanne Shear

Lara Lerner's first amazing feat was that she managed to look calm, pretty and collected when I met her, even while she was up to her knees in debris in the bull-dozed driveway of the almost-renovated Amagansett Applied Arts School. This is a labor of love for her. With her husband, Randy Lerner, she has toiled for almost four years to make this dream a reality and now the school will open on June 15. Did I mention that she had her four-month-old baby on one hip and that her other two children would be home from school exactly 50 minutes later and one of the school's teachers, Jim D'Andrea was in tow? None of this seemed to phase this modern-day Renaissance woman.

On second thought, she is not a Leonardo da Vinci, and this is not the Last Supper — it's just the beginning. A more apt comparison would be to William Merritt Chase, who started one of the most famous art colonies in America in Southampton in 1891 — the Shinnecock Summer School, which was home to artists like Charles Demuth, Georgia O'Keefe and Charles Sheeler through the early twentieth century.

Though looking calm and collected in the face of controlled chaos is an amazing feat, it pales in comparison to the accomplishment of creating Amagansett Applied Arts as a haven for artists (established and amateur) from around the world.

> Art would not let her go. Or she would not let it go: "I always have to have my hands in something."

"I hoped that if I build it, they will come," says Lara.

Lara Lerner grew up in New York City. She attended private schools Horace Mann and then the University of Pennsylvania, both intense pre-professional institutions where "art" in and of itself was not necessarily encouraged as a profession. So Lara studied business and communications, while her husband studied art history at Columbia University.

But art would not let her go. Or she would not let it go: "I always have to have my hands in something," said Lara of her lifelong passion (she took a pinhole photography class at the age of 6).

After school and marriage, she and Randy became self-proclaimed "winter weekenders" in Amagansett. They got stuck here in a snowstorm in 1995, took it as a sign and moved here for good.

The rest is (art) history.

Jim D'Andrea, Lara and I walked through the door of Amagansett Applied Arts together, and her passion for the school was as evident as the sparks of excitement in her eyes revealed. She showed me all the different classrooms where the various painting, drawing, printmaking and textiles classes would take place in a few short weeks, and where the aesthetics of art would be combined with the practical purpose of learning skills.

Though my trip through the school would only last about an hour, the journey that culminates for the Lerners with the opening of Amagansett Applied Arts started over eight years ago, with Ms. Lerner's desire to take an art class and her inability to find one nearby. Instead of hopping onto the Jitney to New York, she and her husband Randy (who has been very involved with art programs and curricula, and sits as the Board Chairman of the New York Academy of the Art) took matters into their own hands, and eventually started looking for a space to build a school.

They zeroed in on the old Nichols Livery Stable, where they saw at once a diamond in the rough. The foundation that the school now sits on was among the very first poured on the East End. And though it took about two years for all of the necessary permits to be obtained, the building and refurbishment finally commenced a year ago.

The secret to the Lerner's success was their incredible patience with the process of building the school, not to mention the tireless research their path took to reach its end.

"Here we plan to offer meaty knowledge of art — technical instruction and the passing on of actual skills. We give clear directions. All of the hours students are here they will be learning things," said Ms. Lerner. Jim D'Andrea chimed in, "They will leave knowing how to do things — and with actual products."

I wondered aloud how they had decided to go this more formulaic route, because a lot of "art classes" are in many cases just glorified studio time with little real instruction.

Mr. D'Andrea said, "Because we think that this method will show the students that they will most likely be better than they ever thought." Jim and Lara are so committed, and convincing, that I found myself (and my artistic capabilities currently extend about as far as a coloring book and crayons) in the middle of a daydream about my own art show, right here in Amagansett, maybe even at the school…

Lara interrupted my reverie with details about the real artists that would be coming to the school to teach, collaborate and show their work. For example, one day when she wandered down Broome Street in New York to research a paper mill called Dieu Donne, she ended up recruiting its proprietor Sue Gosin to come out and establish a mill at the school, which is, according to Mr. D'Andrea, "The best paper mill in the world," and will house the famous printmaker Maurice Payne. Artist Deane Keller, who just had a chair endowed to him at Lyme Academy College of Fine Arts, will teach drawing classes.

The only break in her bubbly demeanor is when Lara discusses her worry that class turnout might not be as high as they want it to be this summer.

Classes offered will fall into nine categories: drawing, painting, printmaking, papermaking, textile, bookbinding, photography and digital media. There will also be a children's section with a representative selection from each category. (For a more detailed list of classes see the end of this article.)

But her characteristic optimism once again reigns supreme: "I know it is the nature of the [start-up] beast. I just want everyone to be able to learn from these tremendous, world-class people while they are here."

Lara and Randy Lerner's sincere altruism never ends. Aside from financing the school out of their own pocket, the first thing the Lerners did as an institution was implement a curriculum for a free six-week art course for area elementary and high school students.

John Alexander, a painter who has lived here for over ten years (and is acting as an advisor at the school), feels that this type of civic-mindedness will reverberate through the local community and the region.

He says, "Amagansett Applied Arts is very important at a time when the New York State budget crisis has cut art programs in schools and communities to virtually nothing."

His friend Dan Rizzi, a painter and also an advisor for the school, adds, "Art is so important as a balance for kids. If I didn't have art when I was young, God knows where I would be. I believe in the school so much that I would be a janitor for a week if that's what they needed."

But aside from the fact that he says, "You just have to have art," Mr. Rizzi feels that the school will "continue to be an important part of generations to come," even if the first year's turnout is still uncertain.

I asked Lara if she thought that she, Randy and their wide circle of advisors and artisans would help fill a contemporary collaborative void and preserve the extensive East End artistic tradition with their school.

John Jonas Gruen

Through Photographs And Stories, The Hamptons Art Community

By Clara Jablonski

Gathered in intimate, happy memories John Jonas Gruen, the writer and photographer, met an interesting mix of young and old at Canio's Books in Sag Harbor last Saturday, who eagerly awaited his tales of the past. Sitting amongst the famous words of writers like Ralph Waldo Emerson and Kurt Vonnegut among others, the group waited anxiously like children at story-time at the local library. What a treat!

Gruen introduced his latest work, Young in the Hamptons: Photographs of the 1950s and 1960s. He spoke about the "miracle of photography" and its capability to capture people's essences. And what he referred to as "simple snapshots" became full works of art that came alive, allowing the crowd to experience the world through Gruen's eyes while he described the "creative ferment of that time."

Painter Jasper Johns, Water Mill, 1959

The aura that surrounded the artistic world of the East End in the mid-twentieth century was one that was heartfelt and very real. With the open landscape of potato fields and sky, a group of writers, artists, and actors began their intermingling, creating the stories that Gruen and his wife Jane Wilson became part of when they moved to Water Mill and that today Gruen looks back on with genuine appreciation.

The first photo Gruen showed was one of himself as a young man. Stunning, yet solemn, he stood there looking as though he could take on the world. Describing the black and white photo, Gruen first remarked about his waistline and then said, "I look moody. I was very moody then," and chuckled at his younger days.

The following picture was of a beauty in a broad-rimmed hat, who we were told was his wife, back when they first came out East. In the photo, she looked wistful, holding onto a tree branch overhead. Gruen said endearingly that, at that time, they were "much in love and poor."

Among the other photos, there was the sculptor Marisol. She was a dark-haired beauty who attended a Christmas party at Dr. Cooper's House in Connecticut with Larry Rivers. An unknown man at the party told Marisol that he was in love with her. He then proceeded to file through the gifts under the tree and give them to her, even though they were not his gifts to give. Later on, she was told that they weren't for her and she couldn't understand how someone could ask her to give back the gifts, saying to Larry that she wanted to go home because she didn't like the stingy people that were there.

Gruen showed a picture of his wife with his daughter, Julia, and Willem Kooning, and another of Bill alone with a walking stick like a prophet at Flying Point Beach, saying that those were two of his favorites. A photo of Robert Rauschenberg, the painter, brought Gruen back to another cheerful memory of when Robert came to visit him in Water Mill with a monkey. "Now, I understand dogs. I understand cats. I even understand parrots. But monkeys?" Gruen chuckled and said that he had to keep the monkey in the bathroom for the duration of his stay. He did.

Gruen also spoke fondly about Leonard Bernstein, writer of West Side Story and former director of the New York Philharmonic. Gruen and his wife threw a birthday party for him in Water Mill. He said that to be in Bernstein's aura at that time was truly an experience. "It was living the glamorous life with them." He described Bernstein as totally and utterly fascinating about everything, whether it be about astronomy, anatomy, or anything in between. In a nutshell, the time they spent together was amazing.

Another story that Gruen entertained his audience with was one about the ravishing and dramatic Stella Adler. She was Marlon Brando's drama teacher and had the most beautiful, hypnotizing green eyes. Adler invited Gruen and his wife for dinner to her home on Fifth Avenue to celebrate the opening night for the show of painter Jane Freilicher, who lived with Gruen and his wife for a time. The food was served by Adler's students, whom she was teaching "how to be waiters." After dinner, she took two silver candelabras and put them in Jane Wilson's lap, saying "Jane, this is to your beauty." Everyone at the table was confused because the honoree of the evening was the other Jane, but Adler was completely convincing.

Jane Freilicher was photographed by Gruen in a dramatic film-star pose. According to Gruen the two Jane's used to paint in the bedroom of the house. As Gruen continued, the stories, now accompanying the photos, began to roll off his tongue like paint on a canvas. Frank O'Hara, who was photographed at Fairfield Porter's House in Southampton, was described as a sharp man who could speak his mind and had a good sense of who he was, one who loved his friends as much as his friends loved him. He was a "really good creature."

Larry Rivers, the painter who was photographed with Maxine Groffsky, was said to be "absolutely for REAL. Everything about him had a reality. That reality was taken one step further because he was an artist, and one step even further because he was crazy." He led a daring lifestyle, one that meshed well with the take-on-the-world attitude that was afloat in these parts at that time. It was said that he had many girlfriends, one of whom was a vibrant au pair, Ms. Clarice Price that he hired.

The last few photos that Gruen displayed for his supporters at Canio's were group shots. One was with the infamous wicker couch that made its way into a number of Gruen's charming photos. Another one was from his daughter's third birthday. Gruen stated that even though it was the child's day, she was the only child there. He said they invited only adults because, honestly, that's whom they associated with. The audience laughed, following Gruen's lead as he switch to the next photo.

"Oh. That's it," he said.

Alan Alda

Actor/ Writer/ Director

By John Capone

During World War II my grandfather served in the Army throughout Europe and in Germany, but he wasn't an Army-guy, distrusted the brass and returned to civilian life as soon as the war was over. Near as I could tell, later on in his life there were only two military men he respected. One was Yossarian; the other was Hawkeye Pierce.

I can remember him pulling the television cart over to the dinner table just as the first strains of "Suicide is Painless" (yes that's really what the song that plays over the opening is called) began to play, so that he wouldn't miss anything. If you have a TV cart you can pull it over to your breakfast table. *M*A*S*H* reruns are now shown on FX (channel 40) at 9 a.m. Alan Alda brought "temporarily miss-assigned" Korean War doc, a role that he did not sign on to play until six hours before the pilot was shot, to life for the entire run of the show from 1972-1983. Over that time, he functioned as the center and heart of the series delivering lines with compassion and a wry-martini-smirk. Saddled with the absurdity of being a doctor in a war, and treating soldiers only so they can get back out to the battlefield to be killed, Hawkeye reflected the post-Vietnam sensibilities of the nation. Over time, that nation has seen that the actor who played Hawkeye had put a great deal of himself into the role. He went on to win six Emmy awards, and is the only person to have been honored by the Academy as a performer, writer and director.

> He went on to win six Emmy awards, and is the only person to have been honored by the Academy as a performer, writer and director.

Mr. Alda was born in New York City, the son of a prominent actor. His love of the theatre was sparked at the age of sixteen when he participated in summer stock in Pennsylvania. Following college he won critical acclaim for his Broadway performance in The Owl and the Pussycat. He also appeared in Fair Game For Lover for which he won a Theatre World Award and The Apple Tree for which he received a Tony nomination.

In 1980, Alda wrote, directed and starred in The Four Seasons, which was an enormous success. He's also written, directed and starred in A New Life, Betsy's Wedding and Sweet Liberty.

Mr. Alda, who resides in Water Mill, was one of the first filmmakers to shoot on the East End when he used the Hamptons as a stand-in for North Carolina in Sweet Liberty. Suffolk County Film Commission Chairman, Christopher Cooke credits him with drawing film production out east.

"Alda really began a boom time for Suffolk County. That was a big studio movie, and he showed his peers that Long Island was a hip place to film." Woody Allen, a frequent Alda collaborator, has shot in the Hamptons a few times. Perhaps most memorably for Interiors, and Everyone Says I Love You, which featured Alda in a lead role. Alda showed off his singing chops in that musical comedy. One of the sweetest moments (it's a Woody Allen movie, so of course most moments are not) of the film comes when Alda intones "Looking at You."

Last month Mr. Alda was the commencement speaker at Southampton College where he received an honorary Doctorate. Perhaps the inscription on his degree said it best (with what sounded like Rosenblattian flair). "You've belittled Woody Allen in his own movies," it read. The address that followed was full of the actors trademark, wit and humanity. For those who are interested, portions of the commencement address will appear this Sunday, June 8 on CBS National News at 6 p.m. and the CBS Morning Show is also expected to air excerpts this Saturday between 7 a.m. and 9 a.m.

Mr. Alda has been the host of PBS's Scientific American Frontiers for over seven years. This season the science specials have focused on everything from archaeologists uncovering life in colonial America to exploring the ocean depths to human physiology. After the last show of the season airs this summer, the series will be back with six new specials starting in January of 2004.

Alan Alda is also a well-known feminist and has even been called "Honorary Woman" by a writer from the Boston Globe. He campaigned for the passage of the Equal Rights Amendment for ten years and in 1976, was appointed by President Ford to serve on the National Commission for the Observance of

BREAKING NEWS

Group House Raided

Marilyn Tolchin-Joseph, owner of 34 Starboard Rd. in Hampton Bays, has some explaining to do. The owner of this alleged illegal share house could find herself facing fines of up to $8,000 for violating Southampton's new group rental laws.

Two weeks ago, in what is being called a "prom party crackdown," Southampton police and code enforcement officers were sent to 34 Starboard Rd. and found not only a large party but also several instances of underaged drinking. Local police issued summonses for possession of alcohol to 31 youths between 16 and 20. The house at 34 Starboard Rd. had been advertised as a prom party house on the Internet and was operating in violation of Southampton's new rental codes, which limit rentals to five or fewer unrelated people and require that they be rented for at least a month. Town permits Tolchin-Joseph had previously obtained to rent out three houses in the town were also revoked last week.

Montauk Rape

On Friday, May 30, Montauk resident Michael Cole, 35, a commercial fisherman and construction worker, lured a 34-year-old New York City woman to his seaside motel and raped her, holding her prisoner for three hours before she escaped and made her way to Southampton Hospital, police said.

Cole met the woman at a Montauk bar then brought her to the Wave Crest II Motel in downtown Montauk. There, law enforcement officials say he beat the woman up, raped and sodomized her, holding her prisoner for three hours. Cole was charged with rape, sodomy, assault, aggravated sexual abuse, and unlawful imprisonment. He plead not guilty to the charges at an arraignment in East Hampton Town Court. Cole has been living in the Wave Crest II since March, according to his estranged wife Michelle Cole, 40. She said she had kicked him out of their house in February after he was arrested on domestic violence charges.

Alda

International Women's Year. Yeah, so maybe it might have made more sense to appoint a woman, but who can argue with that Boston Globe writer who went on to call Alda a "Feminist icon."

Which brings us to the principle dilemma with Alan Alda: He made it so damn hard for the rest of us by being such a nice guy. Alda was one of the first of a type that has bedeviled the image the typical American Male since it first reared its sensitive male-pattern-balding head in the late seventies. The sensitive male killed John Wayne and crippled all who followed (in reality, he's a brute then, isn't he, that sensitive male). It's not just Mr. Alda is a hard act to follow, we are now left in an incontrovertible position worthy of Catch-22. If we as men are sensitive as women expect, they will think us weak, and if we are not they will think us Neanderthals and want nothing to do with us. Either way, we are screwed (or not). And we owe it all to Alan Alda. •

East Hampton Airport

Located on Daniels Hole Road, this airport is only three miles west of East Hampton and is open to the public. Its longest runway is 4,242 feet. Although the only jets that are allowed to land are business flights, all other planes are welcome. This airport sees an average of 149 aircraft operations per day. Call 537-1130.

Francis S. Gabreski Airport

With its longest runway stretching out to 9,000 feet, this airport has the longest runway on the East End and is one of New York's longest (after JFK International). All general aviation and non-commercial flights are welcome to this airport, which is located in Westhampton Beach. Call 852-8095.

Spadaro Airport

One of two airports in East Moriches, the longest runway here is 2,400 feet. It is within a mile northeast of the center of town, right on Montauk Highway. This airport is open to the public, but no jets are allowed. Call 878-1125.

Lufker Airport

With a runway of 2,300 feet, this airport is close in size and proximity to Spadaro Airport, as it is also located adjacent to the Montauk Highway in East Moriches. It is also open to the public and it see an average of about 48 aircraft operations per week. Call 878-6392

Brookhaven Calabro Airport

Located on Dawn Drive in Shirley, this airport's longest runway reaches 4,225 feet. It is open to the public, and averages about 370 aircraft operations per day. The majority of its service is local aviation. Jets are allowed to land here, but only if they can fit. Call 281-5100.

Montauk Airport

This airport is about three miles east of its village's center, and is the furthest East that one can land on Long Island. Its runway length stretches to 3,500 feet at its location on East Lake Drive. It is open to the public for general aviation and air taxi services. Call 668-3738.

Mattituck Airport

Located one mile southeast of Mattituck center, this airport is the best in service to and from the North Fork. It is open to the public with a runway as long as 2,200 feet. General aviation as well as a minor amount of air taxi service is available. It is located on Airway Drive in Mattituck. Call 298-8330.

Southampton Heliport

The helipad's dimensions are 70 by 43 feet, and it sees an average of 33 aircraft operations per month. The heliport is open to the public with half of its services dedicated to air taxi operations. It is located on Meadow Lane about four miles southwest of the center of town. Call 283-0247.

PALESTINE'S U.N. REPRESENTATIVE SPEAKS HERE

By Jan Silver

Upset by the continued violence between Israel and the Palestinians, a non-partisan and non-sectarian group formed on the South Fork this past year. The Committee for Peace in Israel and Palestine's overall goal is to stop the bloodshed in this Middle East region, particularly the murder of innocent children on both sides. To this end, they have invited several speakers to talk about what can be done to bring peace. Dani Vos, a loyal Israeli soldier who is one of nearly 600 "Refuseniks" who will not police the "occupied territories," recently spoke.

Last weekend, the Palestinian Authority's permanent representative to the United Nations, Ambassador Nasser Al-Kidwa, accepted their invitation to speak about the realities of the Israeli/Palestinian conflict from the Palestinian perspective at 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 1, in the Water Mill Community House.. His talk was announced by advertisements in local newspapers and was open to the public. A well-informed audience of more than 100 attended.

Dr Al-Kidwa was introduced by Henry Clifford, chairman of the Committee. Born in Gaza in 1953, Dr. Al-Kidwa graduated from the University of Cairo with a degree in dental surgery. He has been a member of the moderate, secular faction of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), Al Fatah, since his teenage years. He was appointed the Palestinian permanent observer to the United Nations in 1991 by the PLO's Council (headed by Yasser Arafat as the only elected Palestinian leader). He is an advocate for Palestinian statehood and considers himself a part-time "East Side New Yorker."

Dr. Al-Kidwa spoke for about half an hour and then Kathryn Levy, a founding member of the Committee, acted as a moderator presenting the audience's written questions to the speaker. What follows is a combination of his prepared remarks and answers to audience queries.

"We need peace and stability in the Middle East, especially between Palestinians and Israelis.... Ten days ago I was not hopeful about this but now I am [hopeful this week's meeting in Jordan will be successful]. ...the two sides are tired, and that is a good thing because now they must talk."

The most-asked question for Dr. Al-Kidwa concerned Yasser Arafat's effectiveness to continue as the Palestinian leader. He replied, "Arafat is the leader who took the Palestinian people from total non-acceptance of Israel's right to exist to the possibility of co-existence with an Israeli state...and he is still the Palestinian leader calling the shots. If the U.S. pushes for 'regime change,' it will infuriate the Palestinian people.... The Palestinian leadership is ready to negotiate and U.S. leadership is very important at this point."

Here are excerpts from Dr. Al-Kidwa's prepared remarks:

The new "roadmap for peace" being discussed at the summit in Aqaba this week has been put together over the past several years through the hard work of diplomats from the United States, Israel, Palestine and Russia. The document calls for clear, unambiguous acceptance by both Israel and the Palestinians and, although Israel noted 14 reservations about the roadmap, they indicated they agreed with the overall plan.

The Bush administration knows they must take an active role in the conflict, especially because they are now "involved in the neighborhood [Iraq]…. The U.S. is partially responsible for the Israeli/Palestinian conflict because they are a large supplier of weapons to Israel...". [Some audience members might counter this point by noting other nations provide the Palestinians with weapons].

"As a superpower, the U.S. can move things forward in the region. Then the question becomes: is the [peace] movement sustainable. It is significant that Ariel Sharon [Israel's prime minister] and his rightist cabinet have just acknowledged that Gaza and the West Bank of the Jordan River are 'occupied territories' and not part of Israel."

The only possible borders for a new Palestinian state would be what was agreed upon in the 1947 armistice which created the state of Israel, separating it from Arab lands until the 1967 war. The two sides could agree to minor border adjustments but Jerusalem would become a divided city—East Jerusalem would be part of Palestine and West Jerusalem would be Israeli — with the whole city remaining open to all. (Dr. Al-Kidwa says it is difficult for Palestinians to understand why Israelis want to keep Arab land captured since 1967.)

Here are Dr. Al-Kidwa's answers to other questions from the audience:

With regard to what kind of economy a Palestinian state could depend on — "We have a

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #251
Turtle Patrol

I generally guarantee at least 10% truth in every column I write. This column will be my second 100% true column in the past 251 weeks.

As I have mentioned before, my 13-year-old son is a high functioning autistic. I'm not sure if God gave me this child because I am a patient person or if he was given to me as a great source for material. Either way he brings me laughter and tears. I wouldn't trade him for anything except a weekend with Russell Crowe in his Gladiator outfit.

Almost every Sunday, Jake and I make the one-hour trip to Grandma's through wooded areas. Beginning last summer, we began to notice many box turtles on the road and we made it our business to stop, put them in the car and release them into the wild by the stream in the back of Grandma's house. By the time we picked up the third turtle, Jake got concerned.

"I think this is the same turtle we picked up the first time Mom."

"All box turtles look alike Jake."

"It could be the same turtle."

"Yes, it could be. But it's ten more miles to Grandma's. I don't think this turtle crawled ten miles since last week."

"He could be a fast turtle."

"Okay Jake, he could be a fast turtle (welcome to Jakeworld)... I'll tell you what, let's mark his shell and that way you'll always know. We can use Mommy's nail polish (yes, I always have nail polish in the car). I have pink or red. Which one do you want?"

"Pink if he's a girl, but red if he's a boy because if we use pink and he's a boy, the other turtles will think he's gay." Here we go; this is where I start to lose it and get the giggles.

"I don't think that's a real big turtle issue Jake, but let's use red. Both boys and girls wear red. Why don't you paint a red 'J' for Jacob on his back. The next one can be an 'A' and that way you'll know what order they came in."

"But if we paint a 'J' on him, the other turtles might think he's Jewish. And the 'C' turtle would be Christian, but I don't know if their society has developed religion yet. But hey, even if they do have religion, they definitely can't read, so I guess I can use my name." I am laughing out loud by now. I make a mental notation here to write a column about what a turtle religion would be like.

"How come you painted a 'C' on his back, Jake?"

"Cause he's the third turtle we found. You'll have to help me find the first two when we get to Grammies." Oh joy... hunting box turtles in the woods armed with nothing but red nail polish.

Last week on our way to Gram's, we found the 'O' turtle from last summer. He was in the road precariously leaning on another turtle. Never having seen turtles making other turtles, I was not alarmed when Jake went to get them both.

"Mom!" he called. "Mom! It's 'O'! He's trying to get on top of this little turtle! They're stuck together. Never mind, I just pulled them apart. Wow a double rescue!"

Realizing what had occurred I am laughing so hard I'm wrecking my mascara. "Okay honey, that's great, bring them both, let's go." I have not had "the talk" with Jake yet. I'm waiting till he develops better social behaviors, so he doesn't know about birds, bees or turtles. I drove while Jake painted 'J-2' on the back of the new turtle. I looked over at 'O' and he was not looking too happy.

Jake released 'O' and 'J-2' into the wild by Grandma's stream. He reported back to me.

"I put them both by the stream, but 'O' started climbing up on 'J-2' again so I put him on the other side of the stream."

I think turtles do have a religion. And somewhere next to a two foot wide stream at this very minute, a box turtle named 'O' is praying with all his turtle might for the Great Turtle God to either part the stream or build a bridge... and keep that kid the hell away from him.

She avoided any self-aggrandizement and instead focused on her own "selfish desire" to see the products of art come to life.

"Hand-made things are everyday to a lot of people, but to me things like textiles, for example, embody tradition." Jim D'Andrea adds what she won't admit: "[The school] is a continuation of that spirit."

Regardless of where its place in history will be, the true test of time is right here. Lara and Randy Lerner have finally built us our very own art colony in Amagansett. Now we must come.

large pool of human resources and we would need help from other nations to build our economy and society."

Where can Americans get the truth about what is happening in the Middle East. "All media are biased.... You can make a book of all the misleading terminology and misinformation in the media, which is mostly dominated by a few sources such as CNN, Reuters, BBC, etc." He feels the most objective reporting on the Israeli/Palestinian situation in the U.S. is probably in The Nation and some of the Op Ed pieces in The New York Times.

When questioned about Palestinian suicide bombers, Dr. Al-Kidwa responded: "Terrorism is part of the Israeli/Palestinian issue and it must end.... The success of a peace settlement will be through deeds that happen on the ground.... Israel has committed war crimes as defined under the Geneva Convention by, for example, destroying the family homes of suicide bombers."

With regard to Arafat supposedly walking out on the peace agreement at Camp David that President Clinton was trying to broker in the final weeks of his administration: "This is the biggest myth of all in the American press. It failed because Barak [Israel's then president] never implemented things he had previously agreed to and came to Camp David wanting to get to a final agreement before completing the middle...".

It is important for the American Jewish leadership to let the U.S. and Israeli governments know not to allow either Israeli or Palestinian extremists to hijack the peace process.

Founding members of the Committee for Peace in Israel and Palestine include Henry Clifford, Helen Fitzgerald, Anne Kellett, Kathryn Levy, Frances O'Brien, David Olesker, Michael O'Neill, Joseph Policano, Victor Teich and Silvia Tennenbaum. For further information on the Committee, they can be contacted at P.O. Box 286, Wainscott, NY 11975. They will continue to notify the public about speakers and meetings. Their stated purpose is to promote a secure Israel and an independent Palestinian state. –J.S.

Serving the Hamptons for over 25 years

Answered Questions

This Week's Answer By:
Nelson DeMille

What I enjoy best about the Hamptons are the beaches. Second best is deep-sea fishing. Low on the list is running into authors.

Probably the single best time I've had at the beach was the summer of 1969. I'd completed a one-year tour of duty in Vietnam, and I'd just gotten out of the Army. In May, I signed on for a house share in Southampton with seven people, most of whom were friends.

I had no job, no commitments, no appointments, and no worries. A time like that does not come along too often in life.

I had the house to myself most weekdays, and I went to the beach nearly every day. I swam, ran, read and chatted up the ladies.

The war was still going on, but, to paraphrase Hemingway, I did not go to it anymore, nor did I want to think about it much.

We had a three-day party in the hose over the Labor Day weekend, and afterwards, everyone left to go home, except me.

That night, I went down to the beach, nearly empty now, and sat on a sand dune. I drank gin from a bottle, smoked Gauloise cigarettes, and some other stuff, and I finally thought about the war. I don't remember much of that, but what I do recall very clearly is the night sky over the ocean and the sound of the surf, the smell of the sea breeze, and the sand on my bare feet.

The night passed easily, and the sun that had set, rose again from the sea.

I left the war on the beach, walked back to my car, and went home.

–Nelson DeMille

Nelson DeMille was born in New York City, raised on Long Island, and attended Hofstra University for three years before entering the army and serving in Vietnam. He is a prolific writer with more than twelve New York Times bestsellers to his name and his books include The Lion's Game, Plum Island, The General's Daughter, Word of Honor and The Charm School.

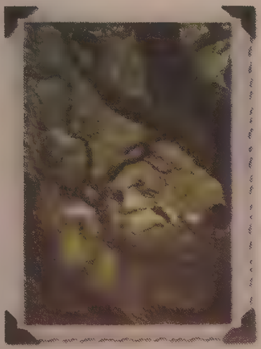
THINGS WE SHARE

Our Community. Our Commitment. Our Historic Lands.

For ten thousand years, the Shinnecocks have lived on these lands. Year after year, our community changes, bringing us neighbors from many races and cultures.

Throughout time the Shinnecock Nation has been committed to preserving our ancestral homeland and its natural environment. As our lands were taken we adapted our economy and our way of life. Still, we continued to preserve and protect our remaining lands while we struggled to become self-reliant.

The Shinnecocks now come to an important moment in our history. We are exploring the development of new economic opportunities that will bring true self-reliance to our nation for generations to come. These opportunities include an Indian gaming establishment built to preserve open space while benefiting the larger Hamptons community. Year-round jobs would be created for local residents. Income would fund local community programs. Property taxes for our neighbors could be reduced. And in keeping with our heritage the building would be tastefully designed, totally unlike urban casinos.



THOUGHTS TO SHARE:

The Shinnecock Nation has the right under the law to use our tribal lands as we see fit. However, we pride ourselves as good neighbors. It's been that way for over 400 years, and as always, we are sensitive to our neighbors and committed to doing what is best for our historic lands.

As we explore options to improve our quality of life, we invite your comments, your questions and your support.

Log on. Let's share our thoughts.

political views are just to the right of Atilla the Hun. I have strong traditional family values and an undying respect for the institution of marriage.

Despite the fact that many of you will make fun of this ad and know who I am, this is a sincere attempt to find a local women, 30-45, who is interested in a long term relationship leading to marriage prior to me conducting a worldwide search.

I seek an in-shape, athletic woman who will share my passion for the wild, loves the smell of wet gun dogs, muddy waders and sunrises in the duck blind. The chill of a predawn run to the Canyon, for me, is as romantic as it gets.

This invitation is not a joke, I'm sincere and if you exist I want to meet you, court you, become best friends and marry you.

All applicants must have teeth. Very recent photo a must.

Well, Tred Barta is engaged. The lucky lady is Annie Mitchell, somebody that Barta went to college with long ago and knew from the University of Colorado ski team in Boulder. He dated her then, which was back in the 1970s, and then they went their separate ways. Barta returned to New York City where he took over his father's business buying and selling airplanes. Annie Mitchell stayed in Boulder.

A reporter from The New York Times tracked Tred Barta and Annie Mitchell down last weekend where they were on a hunting trip together in the Catskills. They dated not only in college, but again about a decade later.

"He'd fly into Boulder and pick me up and we'd go off on adventures and go on fishing trips," Annie said. But then that ended, too.

Annie learned through the grapevine recently that Tred was getting a divorce from his wife of 17 years. In fact, he had called her up about it. Wondered if she was interested in picking up with him again. She declined. Said she didn't want to get hurt a third time.

But then, Tred took out his ad, with his name and phone number at the end, and Tred's business partner sent it to Annie in Colorado.

"Then I knew he was serious and maybe I'd lose my chance again," Annie said. "It was a typical way for Tred to go about finding a mate, full-bore, no-holds barred, just go for it. He's not a typical guy but he can be so romantic."

The Times reporter was curious about the responses that Tred had received and he asked him about it. There had been 90 all together. Tred thought there might be a possibility with five of them and called them up and asked them out.

"There was plenty of chemistry, but no love," Tred said.

He sent flowers to Annie in March, flew to Colorado and took her mountain climbing, fishing and skiing, took her and her 18 year old son Ian out on a hunting trip and taught him how to shoot, and became engaged to her in April. The marriage will take place in the Bahamas next spring when Tred holds his annual Blue Marlin fishing tournament. • has put in already to make this $11 million event happen. He will sue the Town of Riverhead for the money, of course.

On the other hand, even if this concert collapses, it could well serve as a lesson for the promoter of the second concert, an entirely different man named Rick Farman, to get all his ducks in a row far in advance to make sure things happen the way they should, or shouldn't, again, depending upon your point of view.

A final lesson needs to be learned by officials in Riverhead, who took over this abandoned airport runway fifteen years ago when the Navy left — F-14 fighter jets made by Grumman were tested here for many, many years — and have been wrestling with what to do with the property ever since. Fifteen years is a long time. And I won't bother you with all the different proposals and different outcomes that have led to nothing, but it has been a disorganized mess — and meanwhile, the Town of Riverhead struck economic bottom and then — lo and behold — began a major renaissance all on its own, without the benefit of any economic zone in Calverton which is how the Riverhead authorities have finally decided this airstrip should be dealt with. Riverhead now has a major aquarium facility downtown, a huge Tanger Shopping Mall on it's western border, a wonderful downtown waterfront park complete with waterfall, esplanade and gazebo, a summertime water park known as Splish Splash, several paddleboats that go out into Peconic Bay and a soon to be opened restored 19th century Opera House. There are also lots of wineries, vineyards, art galleries, concerts, coffee houses and even parking downtown is becoming a problem. Hooray for Riverhead. All credit to its citizens. Little credit to its waffling government and Calverton Economic Zone.

At last report, the Shinnecock Indian Reservation Chiefs have been talking to the Riverhead authorities about taking over the Calverton Economic Zone for a gambling resort casino there. They are moving ahead with plans to build a casino on the east end, and have proposed to construct it on property they own in Hampton Bays to the north of that hamlet on Peconic Bays, and now they are considering having it not in Hampton Bays but in Riverhead at this airstrip site.

The Shinnecocks have lived in poverty on the East End for generations and it is running a casino is a way out of that. They want to join the mainstream of economic life in America as interpreted by their own Indian Nation and the law allows them to do just that. Surely nobody can find fault in that, though how they go about it and where could be an issue.

In any case, 24 or 48 hours from now, there either will or will not be a giant rock concert in Riverhead. I guess people will go. And they will find out.

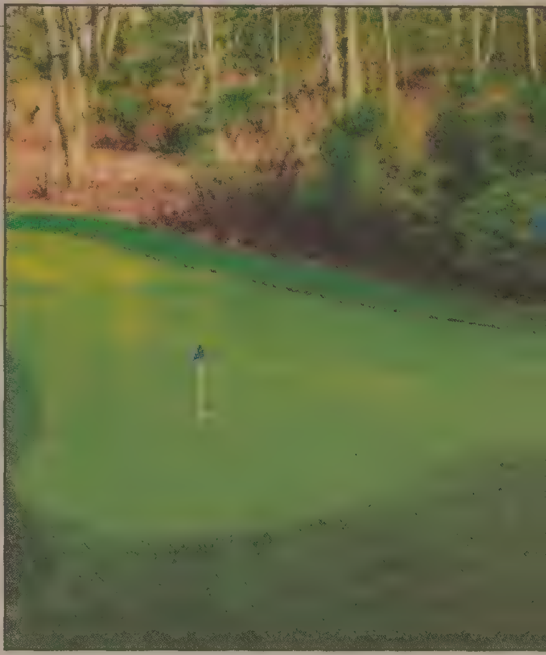
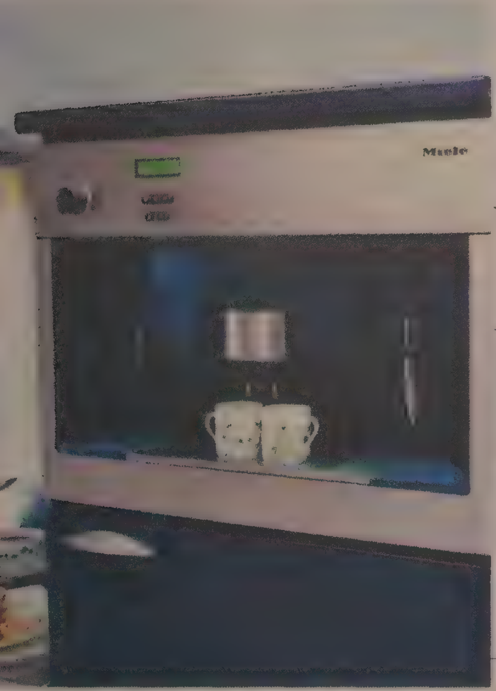
Putting Green Starting At $10,000

You never have to fight traffic to get to a golf course. Practice makes perfect! Why not make par? A synthetic putting green in your own back yard will give you the competitive edge. Practice as often as you like without having to leave home. EPG can design a maintenance free putting green to fit any golfers needs. Whether it is challenging undulations, gradually slopes or just for entertaining. The surface rolls true, just like a bent grass country club style putting green. Looks, feels and plays like natural greens without the hassles of high maintenance.

Available at Exclusive Putting Greens. 516-876-9568.





The Miele Coffee System $1,999

If there's one thing every home needs, it's more countertop space. The new CVA610 Coffee System helps eliminate countertop clutter with its unique, patented built in design. The fully automatic brewing and dispensing system is aesthetically concealed and built directly into your kitchen cabinets. Turn every cup of coffee into a uniquely individual experience. Simply select your grind preference, push a button for espresso, cappuccino, or coffee, and the system brews it for you on demand. The Miele Coffee System also dispenses hot water for tea and hot chocolate, froths milk for a latte, and even remembers your preferred temperature and the size of your favorite cup. The price for the coffee system includes installation.

With Gina Glickman

"MTV Bikini House"

It might have been another rainout this weekend in the Hamptons, but that didn't stop Howard Stern and his gorgeous gal pal, Beth Ostrosky from canoodling around town and shopping in East Hampton on Saturday. And, it didn't stop bikini clad fans from coming out and dressing half-naked in the rainy-chilly weather to witness MTV's Summer Beach House kick off.

MTV launched the very first beach house ten years ago in the Hamptons and now they're back this summer in East Quogue, welcoming the hottest artists right here on Long Island for "Spankin' New Summer Music Week." Big stars hit the stage to perform including, Ludacris, Mya, Michelle Branch and Kelly Clarkson, plus Tyrese, Mark Wahlberg, Nick Cannon, and Lillix stopped by.

The locals went crazy when Long Island's homegrown Grammy winner, Ashanti, came out to perform and promote her latest album, entitled "Chapter II." Ashanti told me, "My first album, 'Ashanti,' was a look into who I am as a person, an artist, an entertainer. As a writer, 'Chapter II' is the next level." If you were a fan of the first album, Ashanti promises even more the second time around. She says, "It was very hard to get back into the groove of writing only because I kept saying it's gotta be hotter then the first time."

Next hot spot, Roccos A La Playa, in Sag Harbor. I met up with another Long Islander, native Hamptonite, Samantha Cole. Sam wanted to spread the word and told me, "Every Saturday night, I'm hosting at Roccos. We are going to have some really good events so everyone has to come out!" Sam got the party started with an exclusive a capella performance of her hot new dance single coming out later this summer called, "Heaven Here with You." After a fresh seafood dinner served personally by owner-chef Rocco himself, Sam and friends danced the night away to the beats of New York's most wanted DJ Scott Sheehy a.k.a., Spin Diesel.

Next week, I'll have more on my one on one interview with Lizzie Grubman and an exclusive with Beyonce Knowles. Please feel free to email with any comments, sightings, or up-coming events, fundraisers, or parties at: whispers@danspapers.com Until then... Life is short! You only live once, party on!

tion they could support this place as a health spa all by themselves.

4. Museum: This could house the largest major art collection east of the Met, featuring works by all the great Abstract Expressionists, DaDaists, Post Modernists and Cubists of the last half of the nineteenth and all of the twentieth century, many of whom worked and lived in this community, some of whom may even have painted this very site when it was farmland before it became a museum.

5. Think Tank: A place for scholars to study American politics and philosophy. A riddle. Is this mansion an example of the greatness of America, where even a simple immigrant (or not a simple immigrant) is given the opportunity to amass a fortune and spend it entirely as he pleases? On himself? What fun! Or is this an example of the huge shortcomings that exist in the American system, where one man can make a huge sum of money and then turn his back on the million or so people living near the poverty line who could use the kind of money spent on this house to house them? The experts could debate for years.

6. Private sale: Surely there is a billionaire out there (out here) who would like to pick up this place as a distress sale. Two hundred million already in to build it to within a smidgen of completion, it can be yours for just fifty mill, surely a tidy sum nevertheless, but completely do-able. Get a forty five million dollar mortgage, then a ten million dollar building loan to finish it up but do it on the cheap for just five million, thereby allowing you the five million left over to make mortgage payments for the next five years during which time you can roll it over. Something like that.

7. Group house. We're talking three hundred people here with fifteen weekend shares of about $5,000 each. Biggest party scene ever. The next MTV house. And plenty of employment for the blue collar types cleaning up after.

8. Newspaper office: Dan's Papers is growing. Soon we'll need more space. As for me, I am sure I would enjoy the master bedroom with the two walk in closets and the matching his and hers bathrooms, with the private dining room, family and gallery down below. I'm told they have ping pong in the rec room. And there is nothing like watching the Super Bowl on the wide-screen movietheater. •

BASSO RUNWAY MAGIC

Dennis Basso knows how to play a crowd. His raspy voice but silky schmooze is legendary so that women learn to think mink. This season on his 25th Anniversary Dennis decided to do his fur fashion show in the evening so that the husbands and boyfriends could attend. So he brought in a runway full of eye candy for the guys while the gals could eye their next indulgence. The show and after-party were at Cipriani, with about 700 people. The buzz was about who would be the final model "the mystery guest" Diana Ross, who basked in the spotlight.

EAST END OPEN PREVIEW

A cocktail party was held last weekend at the Inn at Quogue to celebrate the upcoming East End Open (July 12 at Westhampton Tennis and Sport) to benefit East End Hospice. While the EEO has been a great success, there was a somber air, because its greatest driving force and inspiration, Sue Katz succumbed to cancer a few weeks ago.

1. Standing: Barbara Katz, EEO Chairperson 2003, Pat O'Keefe, EEO Chairperson 2001-2003, Priscilla Ruffin, Executive Director of East End Hospice, Meredith Cohen, EEO Chairperson 2002-2003 Annette Irom, EEO Chairperson 1997-1998. Seated: Sally Bliss, EEO Chairperson 2000-2001, Jacalyn Weinstein, EEO Chairperson 1997-1999, Romana Grant, EEO Chairperson 1995-1996, Ilene Butler, EEO Chairperson 1999-2000 2. UPFRONT PARTY

What's Upfront anyway? Upfront is when the TV networks announce their Fall lineups and advertisers step up and buy commercials betting on hits and avoiding the misses. Grey Alliance held its party at Lobby in New York City and invited producers and stars of small screen shows to entice the advertisers. Survivor creator Mark Burnett was there and has a new reality show called Restaurant set in New York City. Rumor has it a Hamptons person or two will be in it.

INTRODUCING THE VOLVO S60 R

You start with a notion, a belief that true performance doesn't exist solely on a test track. That speed is also a measure of agility and reflex, not just acceleration and velocity.

You think about driving in the real world. A world with stoplights, traffic jams and off-camber curves.

You think about go. 300 bhp turbo-charged twin intercooled 2.5L I-5 engine with a 6 speed close-ratio manual gearbox. 0-6 in 5.4 seconds.

Pull 295 lb.-ft. torque @ 1,950-5,250 rpm.

Hold. Electronically controlled all wheel drive, TRACS anti-spin and DSTC yaw control systems.

You think about adding more performance to Volvo. And adding more Volvo to performance.

Then you build the Volvo S60 R.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

This seems to be the era of all things nostalgic. A friend who looked high and low for a fifties style dress to wear to a fifties party loved a dress I had saved from a country club dance I was invited to all those years ago. Alas it was a bit short waisted for my 5' 9" tall slender friend. Thinking of the fifties brought back memories of a crabmeat salad I was introduced to back then. The sweet crabmeat was piled high into an even sweeter perfectly ripe avocado. Of course I can't recall the other ingredients. No doubt there was mayonnaise in the crabmeat mixture and a variety of seasonings. I just remember how delectable it was.

I decided to recreate the dish with a dressing of Dijon mustard, lime juice, vinegar, a bit of honey and olive oil. The mustard and oil gave the mixture a creamy texture, the lime and vinegar brightened flavors and the honey's sweetness balanced the heat of the tobasco. I was delighted with the results.

When working with crabmeat can crab cakes be far behind? This popular dish has many interpretations. The featured recipe below boasts a generous amount of crabmeat with as little filler as possible and served with a roast pepper sauce. The availability of blue crab along our eastern seaboard is generally available to us in fresh, frozen and canned forms. The three different categories for canned crab are solid lumps of meat for seafood cocktails and salads where appearance is important, smaller pieces of flake meat and claw meat, picked from the claws. ßMy priority of course would be to use the solid lump crabmeat for these recipes.

CRAB MEAT AND AVOCADO SALAD

Cut the avocado just before serving otherwise it will lose its attractive green color.

Serves 4

1 pound fresh lump crabmeat
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon lime juice
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon honey
2—3 drops tobasco sauce
3 tablespoons olive oil
1/2 cup finely chopped scallions
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 ripe, but not over ripe avocados
Lime or lemon juice
Romaine, radicchio and or spinach leaves, washed and spin-dried Parsley or chervil sprigs for garnish

1. Pick over crabmeat to remove any bits of cartilage.
2. Combine mustard, lime juice, vinegar and honey and stir to mix. Whisk in olive oil to completely incorporate then fold in the scallions. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add the crabmeat and fold into the dressing. Can be prepared ahead to this point.
3. When ready to serve cut the avocado in half lengthwise. Separate the halves by holding each half then twisting the halves in opposite directions. Jab the pit with the side of a large knife and turn it out. Sprinkle the meaty insides of the avocado halves with a squeeze of fresh lime or lemon juice.
4. Divide the greens equally on four salad plates and arrange an avocado half on top. Spoon equal portions of crabmeat salad into each avocado. Garnish with sprigs of parsley or chervil and serve at room temperature.

CRAB CAKES WITH ROAST BELL PEPPER SAUCE

Create these restaurant style crab cakes at home to enjoy for lunch or dinner.

Serves 6 - 8

Roast Pepper Sauce

3 red bell peppers, grilled or broiled
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 shallots, finely chopped
Coarse salt and freshly ground pepper
3/4-1 cup chicken stock or low-sodium canned broth

For the crab cakes

1 pound lump crab meat
1 egg
3-4 scallions, finely chopped
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
Pinch cayenne
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons snipped chives
3-4 tablespoons mayonnaise
6 tablespoons fine unseasoned bread crumbs
2-3 tablespoons vegetable oil to saute crab cakes

1. Place peppers on a foil-lined cookie sheet and broil about three inches from source of heat or on a preheated grill until skins blister and blacken evenly on all sides, about 8-10 minutes. Transfer peppers to a brown paper bag, close tightly and let stand about 5-10 minutes to capture the steam. Peel and seed the peppers while still warm but cool enough to handle.
2. Melt butter with oil in skillet and saute shallots for 30 seconds until translucent. Add peppers, season with salt and pepper to taste and stir to mix. Add broth and bring to a boil. Simmer about fifteen minutes. Cool and transfer the mixture to a food processor or blender and process until a smooth puree. Taste to adjust seasoning as necessary. Can be prepared ahead and refridgerated until serving time.
3. Pick over the crabmeat and set aside. In a mixing bowl beat the egg with scallions, mustard, cayenne and lemon juice. Fold in the chives, mayonnaise and 3 tablespoons breadcrumbs and stir to mix. Gently fold the crabmeat into the mayonnaise mixture. Divide mixture into 6 - 8 equal parts and form into round patties. Cover and refrigerate at least one to two hours to firm the cakes before cooking.
4. When ready to serve coat crab cakes lightly with remaining breadcrumbs. Warm oil in a heavy skillet and saute crab cakes about 2-3 minutes on each side until golden brown, turning once. Serve with red pepper sauce and additional snipped chives, if desired.

Dining In The Hamptons

Side Dish

By Aji Jones

Sag Harbor's own celebrity chef and cookbook author, George Hirsch was recently on "Live!" with Regis and Kelly. Hirsch cooked up a Hampton's beach bake with all the traditional American favorites. The famous chef also helped Live! kick off their annual "Grill Friday" segment. Way to go George! Everything looked delicious.

Summer is here, and that means time for a lobster bake! Tierra Mar located in Westhampton offers their popular Monday night lobster bake, every Monday from Memorial Day until Labor Day. Served on the outdoor deck overlooking the Atlantic Ocean and including a raw bar/buffet, first and second course, and dessert, Tierra Mar's lobster bake is accompanied by live music all evening long. The dinner costs $60 per person, not including tax and gratuity. For more information, call Tierra Mar at 288-2700.

Do you prefer clams to lobster? Well B & B Clambakes is offering a special discount on their traditional clambake package for Father's Day. The special discount is available Sunday, June 8 through Sunday, June 15. The package includes lobster, clams, mussels, chicken, corn and potatoes, all prepared and ready to be cooked. The special price for Father's Day week is $30 per person. To order a clambake call B&B Clambakes at 726-6802.

All of you early birds out there can rest easy. Southampton's The Plaza Café (283-9323) will now offer a special summer early evening prix fixe every night from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. The special dinner includes three courses for $25 per person plus tax and gratuity.

Pacific East (267-7770) in Amagansett will be expanding their hours to seven nights beginning last night. Also, they will be offering their $19.99 three-course prix fixe nightly from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. and all night on Thursdays. Super Sushi night will now be on Monday beginning June 9 where all sushi is 1/2 price all night. New items have been added to the summer menu as well.

With the highest food rating on the East End and the highest eclectic food rating on all of Long Island (Zagat 2003), Mirko's in Watermill is sure to please even the pickiest of pallets. Open for dinner Thursday through Monday call 726-4444 for more information.

If you're thirsty for Margaritas and you're in the Hampton Bays area stop by Margarita Island Restaurant and Sushi Bar. Open Thursday through Monday, Margarita Island offers waterfront dining on the Shinnecock Bay beginning at 12:30 p.m. Also, check out their two for one margaritas special from 4 to 7 p.m. Call 723-3200 for details.

Also in Hampton Bays, Tide Runners located on the Shinnecock Canal announces the return of their wildly popular Friday happy hour. Open Thursday to Sunday for lunch and dinner, Tide Runners also offers a Sunday brunch. Seasonal boat slips are available. Call 728-7373 for all the info.

Montauk nights heat up this summer at Nick's on the Ocean (668-4800). The laid back eatery and beach bar has live music on Saturdays from 3 to 7 p.m., as well as island calypso, reggae, rock n' roll and blues on the outside deck. Stop by for all the fun and festivities.

We hear that: New York Giants head coach Jim Fassel popped in to Rowdy Hall with his wife for a drink at the bar on Saturday afternoon… Carson Daly and entourage sipping sake at Sen one night after his ex Tara Reid did the same… Ron Delsener chowing at Nick & Toni's…Nicole Miller was in Oasis recently for a late meal with two gentlemen enjoying the new crispy calamari salad… Rene Zellweger leafing through Noel Jeffrey's Design Diary: Innovative Interiors while at Café on Main and stopping at the section that featured Lizan Tops Gallery owners' Arnie Lizan and Elizabeth Tops house – while Elizabeth Tops' walked by!

The Maidstone Arms (631-324-5494) in East Hampton will be holding a Spanish Wine Dinner on Friday evening June 6, from 6 to 10 p.m. The four-course dinner, created by their chef Paul Del Favero, will be paired with fine Spanish wines selected by Amagansett Wines & Spirits. Price per person, including wine is $85 per person, plus tax and gratuity. Reservations are suggested.

Stop in any evening at The Restaurant at the Inn (at Quogue), and you will find the stars of MTV's Beach House – as well as Beyounce Knowles from Destiny's Child, Will Smith, Kurt Loder, Ludicrous, Maverick, Mark Wahlberg and…who knows who else will turn up. Last week Kelly Clarkson of American Idol fame did a photo shoot in the dining room for Cosmo Girl. And this past weekend Brittany Spears showed up for a stay at the Inn.

What's brewing in Westhampton Beach? From now until June 22, stop in to the Hampton Coffee Company, and help yourself to a small cup of freshly brewed Westhampton Beach Blend Coffee absolutely free. The only catch is that it's limited to one free cup per person. If you're a year-round Westhampton Beach resident or work at a local business, you will receive 20% off their Westhampton Beach Blend coffee beans to bring home. Located 127-1&2 Main Street, in the Shopping Cove Courtyard, breakfast, lunch munus are available.

Dining In The Hamptons

Margarita Island Restaurant

43 Canoe Place Road, Hampton Bays
(631) 723-3200

As we sat out on the deck of a thatched roof hut amidst the shady palm trees overlooking the dark turquoise bay, we admired the phenomenal view of the rolling hills while sipping on our Margaritas. I remember thinking: I hope the bartender, John Matthews only put Cuervo and fresh strawberries in this frozen margarita because I could swear that there is a pirate walking the gangplank before me. With a few shakes of my head, I came to the realization that my friend Kurt and I were not on an island somewhere in the South Pacific, but in Hampton Bays on the Shinnecock Bay at an adorable waterfront restaurant called Margarita Island. And that there really is a pirate or a statue of a pirate at the end of the pier, and the hills were our very own Shinnecock Hills.

This is Margarita Island's second season opened and owners Paul Curry and Tom Genovese and executive chef Dave Moritz have made lots of new and creative changes to the place all with the tropical theme in mind. They have added a sushi bar with a separate "Sushi Beach" menu. They also have their version of "High Tea" from 4-7 p.m., which means 2 for 1 margaritas, and beer specials are served. This is where they really excel because the drink menu has a slew of luscious drink options. I made the decision to order a different type of margarita each time that I come here to imbibe. On this beautiful evening I chose the frozen strawberry margarita made with fresh fruit, triple sec and Cuervo tequila and my companion ordered the Mango Margarita with salt. Both are excellent choices. They also have a cinnamon and orange margarita, a peachy keen margarita and a sweet chocolate margarita. I may even have to try a Mandatory, a Windex or a Chocolate Martini; all highly lethal I am told.

We were having so much fun that I almost forgot that we were here to eat. Our lovely waitress, Shannon (who incidentally went to the same high school as I did, but 14 years later) brought us to our outside table where she gave us menus that are printed on neon lime green glow in the dark pieces of plexiglass, and told us about the specials. She suggested that we do a sampler of appetizers but that the huge nacho platter topped with chicken or beef was a must. We went with the chicken and we were not disappointed. This mountainous heap was filled with everything (a meal unto itself). We then had some spicy hot island style chicken wings, which were very meaty, and fried Cajun calamari – all tender rings, no chewy tentacles. But, my favorite, the coconut shrimp, was large and perfectly battered (all reasonably priced at $8).

The Margarita Island menu also has "something simple" which consists of grilled hamburgers ($8), a steak sandwich with portobello mushrooms melted mozzarella on herb focaccia bread ($12), a chicken ceasar wrap ($9), a chicken and roasted vegetable wrap ($9), and a grilled chicken sandwich with mango mayonnaise ($8). Their soup du jour is seafood bisque ($6) and the Caesar salad can be topped with chicken or shrimp ($8).

Then it was on to the "Sushi Beach" whose menu is so extensive, it includes miso soup ($2), sushi by the piece ($2-$3), rolls ($4-$9) as well as assorted combination platters, all very reasonable. I asked Owen, the sushi chef to prepare us a small plate of his favorites that consisted of skewered Ebi (shrimp), broiled unagi (fresh water eel), farmed raised snake (salmon), local hirame (fluke) and blackened tuna seared with Cajun spices all served with rice, soy sauce and wasabi.

HOMEGROWN WITH BRIAN HALWEIL

The Next Quarter Billion Clams

On a recent morning just before Memorial Day, with crystal calm water, Captain Charles Steidle gives the order to drop anchor. His 61-foot boat, the Paige Lane, floats in the middle of a forest of small white buoys in the Great Peconic Bay about half way between Noyac's Towd Point and Robin's Island.

Steidle descends from the wheelhouse to work along side his two crew members emptying 70-pound bags of clams onto a three-tiered wooden rack that hangs from the boat's winch. One graceful arch and the clams scatter like rice falling out of a sac. The rack measures roughly seven feet high and eight foot square, and looks like an oversized set of drawers. Overall waders, rubber boots, and Popeye-sized forearms are standard issue for the crew.

Steidle uses the winch to lower the rack, heavy with 5,000 pounds of clams, into the water, attaches a white buoy to the top, records the buoy's number and triangulates the location using two points on the shore.

At first blush, this operation appears to be unfolding in reverse. (A clammer is supposed to bring his catch to the surface, not drop it into the ocean, right?) But in a process that one New York Times writer described as a "shellfish version of a Hamptons spa treatment," these clams, from a bay in Greenwich, Connecticut considered unfit for human consumption, will spend a minimum of three weeks purging in the pristine Peconic environment, like so many other visitors to the East End.

"The only thing that's polluted is what the clam eats," Steidle explains, which also happens to be the part of the clam that humans prefer: the stomach. "We bring the clams out here to eat clean food." All under the watchful eye of the New York Department of Environmental Conservation, which monitors the clams to prevent the transfer of diseases or pollutants from one body of water to another.

The captain maneuvers the boat over to another buoy, and uses the same winch to haul a rack upward. The rack breaks the surface with a splash and roughly 25,000 clams clench like so many synchronized water fountains. They glisten with tints of red and blue, and a sweet briny scent overwhelms the air. The smaller ones are littlenecks and topnecks; cherrystones are in the middle; and chowder clams are the heftiest. (They are all the same species, known variously as hardshell clams, quahog or Mercenaria mercenaria.)

Crabs, algae, baby black fish, brine shrimp, and other assorted sea life fall off of the rack, and Steidle points to several big striped bass lingering for these dropping.

"The racks are like an artificial reef," Steidle says. "Fishermen are catching over these buoys, when there are no fish outside the buoys." He occasionally brings his grandson out to catch porgies and black fish.

Steidle, who is 56 years old and lives in Water Mill, has been raking Long Island clams since he was ten. He graduated to working on clam boats, which dredged the ocean floor—a standard process that wrecks havoc on bottom-dwelling sea life. Steidle began his current cleansing business 23 years ago, after several consecutive seasons of brown tides in the mid-1980s decimated the native clam beds.

How many clams has he harvested in nearly half a century? "Maybe a quarter billion," he calculates.

In that time, he's automated certain aspects of the operation to save money, time, and his back. He patented the "off bottom rack system," which he says is a welcome economic and ecological alternative to dredging.

You might even call Steidle a gentleman bay-man. There's no drinking, smoking, or swearing on the boat—captain's orders—which "makes it hard to retain a crew," he deadpans and then shoots a smirk out of the corner of his mouth. When Carol Richardson, a shellfish monitor for the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation who, at 87, is also New York State's oldest employee, began riding his boat eighteen years ago, Steidle brought her a rocking chair and placed it in the covered deck house to keep her dry.

By 9:30 a.m., the Paige Lane is pulling back into Towd Point to unload 25,000 pounds of clams, "just as most people are starting their day," Steidle says with a smile. A refrigerated truck is waiting, and the clams may be on a plane to Las Vegas or London or even San Juan, Puerto Rico by noon. (None get sold locally, which suits Captain Steidle since his daily harvest rivals that of all the baymen with hand rakes combined. Ironically, clams from Maryland, Virginia, and other countries are already squeezing the baymen out of the East End market.)

The captain sends this writer on his way with a generous bag of prime cherrystones, and a few suggested recipes: steamed and then dipped in hot-sauce; roasted on the barbecue until open; raw and chilled on ice. And then he's pulling away from shore again, eying the next quarter billion clams.

Margarita

Everything was extremely fresh.

Before we were ready to call it quits, we realized that the executive chef, Dave Moritz had a few more surprises in store for us. One of his specialties is the seared sea scallops in a teriyaki glaze over rice ($19). This was one of the most tender and juicy dishes I have ever eaten. He also prepared a grilled chicken breast with blackbean and mango salsa over rice, ($17) which was a delicious Costa Rican type of dish probably picked up by the chef during one of his many visits to South America where Dave attributes most of his influence. Some of his other entrees are his horseradish-encrusted salmon served with roasted garlic whipped potatoes ($20), sesame tuna with rice and Asian slaw ($21), linguine with fresh clams, served in either red or white sauce ($18), and a marinated 16 oz shell steak topped with gorgonzola cheese and crunchy fried onions ($23). I must admit that I am very impressed with the wide selection of food.

I had heard that the appetizers are the rage here, but it is as though the chef is trying to please every type of guest. As I later discovered, he has been doing just that for over 22 years. He has plenty of experience cooking and catering for huge corporations such as Chiquita Banana, Levi's, Diesel Clothing Corp and most recently feeding the entire staff and gang over at the MTV house on Dune Road. I just hope that I will be able to sample everything on the menu before the end of the summer when they close. Margarita Island is open Thursday-Monday 12:30-closing serving "High Tea" from 4-7 p.m.

Dan's GOLF GUIDE

Bring Your Irons For A Walk In The Woods

The Woods at Cherry Creek
Riverhead

By Roy Bradbrook

The original course at Cherry Creek opened back in 1996 and since then has built up a deserved reputation as a very well managed and cared for course where the public can play a testing round of golf at affordable prices. In fact it became so popular that tee times were becoming increasingly difficult to obtain, especially at the height of the golf outing season in mid summer.

Cherry Creek is a relatively flat, open style course and when the owners, Charles Jurgens and Vincent Sasso decided to build a second course on land immediately across the road they found it to be ideally suited to a very different form of design. Last Memorial Day their new course, named "The Woods at Cherry Creek" and designed by Charles Jurgens and Young and Young, who were responsible for the first course, opened and together with the renamed 'Links at Cherry Creek' offers golfers totally different choices of playing conditions.

The Woods course truly does wind its way throughout the trees as we found standing on the first tee, for this is no wide-open welcoming hole. It is immediately obvious that success here will come from the ability to be straight and to exercise sensible course management. Most of us, out of habit reach for the driver but this apparently short, 354-yard hole from the second longest choice of four tees, has a subtle winding layout that demands accuracy. The second hole is a short par 3 but beware the water. Then comes probably the best hole on the course, a par 5 that unusually for a par 5, has the distinction of being rated the toughest hole. At 535 yards, most of us who regularly need three shots to reach the green, will look to the driver for length but be aware that, after negotiating a tight tee shot, your second may still have to be played to a landing area no more that 40 feet wide between dangerous hazards. Even when the green has been reached, two putts are not a given on a large undulating surface. The greens throughout the course were very true but hard, so it was difficult to get approach shots to bite. The rain we experienced during this round and for days after will almost certainly have brought about a radical change to this!

When you play to the green on the 350 yard fifth hole believe what your scorecard diagram shows. The water really is in play for fully 80% of the circumference of the green. The sole piece of land is at an awkward angle to the fairway so it's best to treat this as an island green. Holes 7 & 8 share another interesting hazard that resembles a bottomless pit and is set to catch wayward shots. Then on 9, a long par 5, just in case you have managed to put your ball in the middle of the fairway, you find a large, solitary tree right in the middle of the fairway that probably will affect the decision you make for your second shot.

Starting the back nine, it was on the 10th hole, another of these apparently short par 4s, that my playing companion commented, "This is a good course if your sideways game needs practice", a sentiment I totally concurred with as we both played out of the trees! The 12th hole is a 443-yard par 4, rated as the second hardest hole. The fairway is undulating and tight and if you miss the green right there is what at first looks like a drainage sump but as you get closer you see it is a small ravine, complete with water and ducks. Most golfers would be well advised to play this as a par 5 unless they are both long and straight.

It is easy to lose track of this course's subtleties if you're spending the better part of your day choosing escape routes through the trees. But the very well-conditioned fairways carry their own obstacles to trip up the straight hitters, whether it's rolling undulations which you don't want to be on the downside of or the myriad bunkers which escape detection from the tee.

Most diabolical of all, however, are the out-of-bounds stakes on the 18th hole, stirring like partisans in the forest, eager to capture slightly wayward shots. But by the time you've arrived at the elevated 18th green, the trees have parted and there is a welcome expanse lying before you: Cherry Creek's original Links Course, whose wide open fairways may beckon you like a latter-day Ernie Banks: "Let's Play Two!"

Cherry Creek, under the direction of General Manager Steve Keating and his very professional staff, has built a great reputation for the way they organize tournaments and outings and one outing that many golfers will want to support will be held on August 22nd, when both courses will be used, to benefit Lieutenant John Fernandez of Rocky Point, who had both feet amputated following a bomb blast during the conflict in Iraq. Details can be obtained from the club.

The Woods at Cherry Creek is a great addition to the courses available to golfers on Eastern Long Island and sets out to offer country club standards on a daily basis. The owners were extremely wise to make their second course so completely different from the first course. Casual visitors can decide which type of course they wish to play and for those who wish to enjoy full membership here, several plans are still available offering the use of both courses, which must add considerably to the pleasure. Also a large, new, luxurious clubhouse on the Woods course is due to open shortly and will provide full service to golfers and the 126 seat restaurant will be open to both golfers and members of the public alike.

WHAT A MISERY golf is! If the hardest thing in sports is to hit a moving ball with a bat, shouldn't the opposite then be true? What could be simpler than striking a stationary ball with a fat-faced club? Yet, how many of us have wrapped such a club around the nearest tree in frustration?

In other parts of the U.S. such recklessness does not come without risks. Fling a club in the low country of South Carolina and you may find yourself snout to snout with a crusty ol' gator. Or, perhaps snort to snort in the Texas ranch country after steering a tee shot toward the out-of-bounds steaks.

Wherever you play, nature's role is likely to be prominent. And though we don't have exotic zoology lining our courses out here, the layouts on the North Fork and Hamptons feature some of the loveliest golf scenery anywhere in the country. The twin forks are where farms, coastline and big sky converge. The East End's best courses reflect this splendor.

Next time you skull an approach shot from 160 yards, take a good look around first. Chances are, that iron you're so disgusted with will remain in your hands and a little smile might even emerge as you take notice of what a beautiful game golf really is.

[illegible] Hill Golf & Country Club, Baiting Hollow

Set on the high bluffs above Long Island Sound, this private Robert Trent Jones gem features rolling terrain dotted with ponds and bordered by groves of native hardwoods. The first and 18th holes take maximum advantage of the dramatic elevation changes.

Think the name of this course is boulderdash? Take a good look at this megalith. This is a short course that plays long due to a rugged, hilly New England-esque landscape. One dogleg in particular requires a funicular to get to the green.

GREAT ROCK GOLF CLUB, WADING RIVER

LONG ISLAND NATIONAL GOLF CLUB, RIVERHEAD

Here the landscape is a total concoction. A former sod farm has been sculpted into an intriguing links-style course with pinball mounds, hidden abysses and waves of fescue grasses. There's nothing fabricated about the corn field bordering the 6th tee, however.

INDIAN ISLAND COUNTRY CLUB, RIVERHEAD

Laid out along the edge of the Peconic River where it feeds into the bay. Several holes play along the water and from the back tees require carries over tiny inlets.

Strengths: Excellent design features, mix of target golf and grip it and rip it.
Weaknesses: Pricey.

LONG ISLAND NATIONAL GOLF CLUB, Riverhead (727-4653)
Strengths: Several memorable holes, routing, sense of other time and place.
Weaknesses: Undivided fairways at no. 2 and 3 cause slow play, pricey.

MIDDLE ISLAND COUNTRY CLUB, Middle Island (924-3000)
Strengths: Three strong nines of high merit, par 5s, extraordinary finishing holes.
Weaknesses: Scruffy in spots, two of the nines have nearly identical starts.

MONTAUK DOWNS, Montauk (668-5000)
Strengths: Incredible terrain, terrific variety of holes, stern test of all clubs.
Weaknesses: Uphill 10th often plays into sun, making semi-blind shot fully blind.

PINE HILLS COUNTRY CLUB, Manorville (878-4343)
Strengths: Super back nine, length from tips, practice facilities.
Weaknesses: No par 3s between no. 4 and 13! (only 3 overall).

ROCK HILL GOLF COURSE, Manorville (878-2250)
Strengths: Demanding first six holes, overall difficulty, brutal no. 18, burgers.
Weaknesses: Back nine mostly open and flat, outing factory.

SPRING LAKE GOLF CLUB, Middle Island (924-5115)
Strengths: Conditioning, finishing holes, greens, length
Weaknesses: Pretty, but seldom inspiring aesthetically (Thunderbird Course:)

SWAN LAKE GOLF CLUB, Manorville (369-1818)
Strengths: Water hazards, scenic beauty, holes 9-12
Weaknesses: No driving range, occasional sogginess.

TALL GRASS GOLF CLUB, Shoreham (209-9359)
Strengths: Wind, premium on club selection, risk-reward scenarios.
Weaknesses: Short when the wind's not up.

Away At School. . . By David Lion Rattiner

Over the past four months I was consuming caffeine like it is was my job. At first, it was just a small cup of coffee with milk and sugar. I'd drink it with my breakfast burrito, which I had almost every day during the school year. A small cup of coffee never hurt anybody and I never really thought much of it. Early in my addiction, a small cup of coffee gave me a little pep in the morning. It was a blip, but that's about it.

My little cup of coffee was a psychological piece of heaven. The breakfast burrito, the crisp Boston air, and a small cup of Joe was such a great way to start the day. It was my trademark breakfast. If my friends needed me early in the morning, all they had to do was walk down to the quad and meet up with me at the little breakfast stand there.

One day, however, this breakfast strategy changed. I was walking down the street and noticed this little coffee shop right near my dorm on campus. I looked up at the sign and wondered if it was a Starbucks. It wasn't. There were a couple of people that were drinking coffee out and reading the newspaper, doing homework, or just reading a book. "Cool!" I said to my self and walked inside.

Simple confusion came over me when I got to the counter. There were so many choices and combinations. There were lattes, cappuccinos, extra shots, macchiato, yerba tea, green tea, espresso tea, Americano, soy ragasmackachaco – the list went on and on. It was really mind boggling. I couldn't just order a regular cup of coffee. Just a regular cup seemed kind of lame in a place like this. I was feeling tough.

"Hi, a double espresso please."

"You sure?"

"Yeah I'm sure."

I gave the guy a why-did-you-ask-are-you-sure? look and sat down. I took a sip. It tasted awful. I sipped again. Yep, it definitely tasted awful. I drank the whole thing and sat back.

It came on slow, like a slithering snake. It was the pep, it was the good stuff. My heart was beating like a jackhammer, my hands were shaking, my eyes and brain more alert then ever before. I could use this stuff to help me study. I was invigorated, I was taken over, I was hooked.

WILL DO MATH PROBLEMS FOR COFFEE
U of P

Addiction was almost immediate. I started drinking lattes with one shot, then two shots, then three shots. I'd have lattes for breakfast and then I'd have one after lunch. I was a caffeine fiend. Suddenly just one shot wasn't enough. It was not nearly enough. I couldn't even function unless I had two shots, at least two shots. I would walk in and sit in the coffee shop just because I liked the shop itself. I'd try not to order an espresso but I was so addicted that just the smell got me excited. I started learning the entire lingo, sometimes ordering things that neither I nor the counter person could understand.

"Hi, a small, triple, vanilla, soy macchiato matte latte royal. Can you put a roobio shot in with that and a honey figget?" They would go back and get the manager.

Money would pour out of my pocket to support the habit. It became normal to sleep poorly, to spend thirty dollars a week on it, to be afraid to go a day without it. I would be afraid of the crash after the pep. I would time my espresso consumption so that I would have the pep during my classes and the crash when I got home. I'd need my fix. The counter workers became my friends; they would cut me deals when I didn't have money. I needed my fix. I considered buying in bulk. It was out of control during finals week. I had hit rock bottom. I decided that when I got back to East Hampton for the summer, I would cut it out of my diet completely, I would go cold turkey.

Summer has come and I am back in East Hampton. I have been sticking to my no espresso guns and have gone three days without caffeine. Non-Starbucks espresso is hard to come by in these parts, which is helping. I think that after three days it is finally out of my system. The third day though, I don't know if I even want to tell you about it.

I could barely move; I was concerned that I had contracted mono. I would get up and get a headache. I slept most of the day and even if I wasn't asleep I would just lay in bed with my eyes closed. The light was too much for my brain to process. I only got out of bed to get water and food. Sometimes I would splash water on my face and look in the mirror. "It's just withdrawal, Dave. You'll make it through. Tough it out man; think about how tough high school football was. If you can make it through that you can make it through this."

I felt weaker than I had ever felt before. Nothing made sense to me. I tried reading this newspaper while lying down. I could read but the words were just not making sense.

Next week I'm getting my breakfast burrito and going surfing.

Shop 'til You Drop.....With Maria Tennariello

Here comes the sun…Then the rain…again. The weather doesn't stop people from shopping though; the towns had a very busy weekend…Let's do some rainy day shopping.

Casual Home is doing it again! They are having a 10% to 40% off, select furniture and accessories. Yikes, never let me loose in this store, I never leave…There is a wonderful selection of mirrors, prints, tables, chairs, stools, beds, desks, armoires, lamps, computer cabinets, TV stands and tons of accessories. Located on County Road 39 in Southampton, you will love this store.

Father's Day and graduation are almost here and you can get dad and the grad the gifts they really want at Rose Jewelers on Main Street in Southampton and East Main Street in Patchogue. For the adventurous guy or the rugged gentleman, there are steel watches with crocodile or nylon mesh bands from the outdoorsy Swiss Army and Tag Heuers to Maurice Lacroix Swiss watches' sport-elegant "Sphere" and Baume & Mercier's "Capeland S", to the ultimate gift of a Rolex. For her, Lancaster is available exclusively from Rose Jewelers. Dressed with candy color aluminum bezels rimmed in stainless steel and interchangeable color bands, some of these watches sparkle with blue, pink and yellow sapphires or rubies or diamonds. I love the June birthstone (pearl), and the price is an affordable $65 for six millimeter pearl earrings.

Collette Country Store at 10 Main Street in Southampton is just what the doctor ordered for spring cleaning. This shop is like "a yard sale on Main Street" indeed. It is a fine furniture consignment store stuffed with tasteful antiques, contemporary home furnishings, table top, fine art, linens and bedding, children's furniture and much, much more. If you are moving or just cleaning out, Collette's Country Store can help you as they buy and sell…

Hildreth's Patio and Clearance Center on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton and The Home East on Pantigo Road in East Hampton as well as the original store on Main Street is having a "Comfort Zone" sale on Sealy beds and Stearns & Foster beds. There is a cool savings of 30% to 35% off on the Sealy and/or take an additional 10% off the already reduced Stearns & Foster. The best part is all the pluses, like free local delivery, set up, removal, and more.

In the Bridgehampton Commons, McNamara's Liquors is having an in store wine tasting on Saturday, June 7, from 3-6 p.m. And you will get a chance to meet Chris the newest addition to the McNamara clan. With Father's Day around the corner, you can choose something special for the special dad in your life.

Hamptons Gifts by Design

I found a great new venue for Hampton gifts. that are out of sight. The Hampton Gifts By Design is responsible for making up great gift baskets for any occasion. Created by Bonny Jean Renick, "The Hamlet" gift basket includes Wolffer Verjus, Tate's Cookies, Melinda's Weeds Soap, Seafood Shop Rub and La Crepe Biscotti. There are several designer style baskets to choose from including "The Hamptons" Give Bonny Jean a call at 537-1382 for information and gift orders.

You will just flip for the new "Hamptons Flip," the new colorful summer thong sandals bedecked and bejeweled in colorful Swarovski crystals that are decorated by Shelley Lindenauer, president and founder of Daisy Jane and Angel Designs. Available right now at Biba NY on Newtown Lane in East Hampton, and In Style on Jobs Lane in Southampton, The Hamptons Flip retails for $118,, Check them out, they are fabulous….

Time to get myself in gear and get going on home. Everytime I leave Sag Harbor and pass by Long Beach, I can't help but think how lucky I am…

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops or sales, please email me at shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at: 631-537-3330.

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

The Blues brothers called their old car the "Soulmobile," which, real or imagined, touches upon the fact that many car collectors believe certain cars have more "soul" than others.

To an old Ford collector, the Model "T" and model "A" are downright religious objects. To the younger Ford collector, the '65 Mustang and '55 T-Birds are sacred artifacts. To the connoisseur of all Fords, young and old, the Ford Shelby Cobra, the GT-350, and of course the GT-40 have to have more soul than any other car Henry ever manufactured.

You'll notice that the cars held in high esteem were all designed to be racing cars. In the imagination of the car collector, racing cars are the epitome of soulful thought, because there was more research and development involved in their design, as well as the dreams and hopes of their creators, as compared to mundane "production" cars.

Let's face it, race cars were designed for one reason: to win races. They are no-compromise vehicles. Many years ago, I was sitting in the California office of Ron Wakefield, the then engineering editor of Road and Track magazine. Above his head, over his desk, was a large four-foot by five-foot color photograph of a Ferrari V-12 engine. It looked like a GTO racing engine because it was endowed with six downdraft Weber carburetors and "bundle of snakes" exhaust headers. To me, visually, it resembled a complex and magnificent piece of automotive sculpture. Ron noticed that I was staring at the photo and commented, "Isn't that an amazingly simple design?"

I was surprised by his comment, but he went on to explain that it was simple because all it was designed to do was to produce lots of horsepower, rev to a high limit all day, and perhaps last only twenty four hours before a rebuild. Today's street car engines are much more complex in the sense that they have to run dependably for at least 100,000 miles, at all ambient temperatures, always start instantly, and of course get decent gas mileage and produce zero emissions.

So let's face it, what engine will have more soul, the one in the kick-ass Ferrari race car or the one in a Honda Civic?

Racing heritage has always given cars more soul. Henry Ford knew this so in the early nineteen hundreds raced as a driver in some model "T" specials.

'65 Ford Mustang

The most desirable German collector cars are the pre-WW2 racing cars. The Auto Unions and Mercedes are legendary racing machines, whose images conjure up the soul of the darker side of man, because they were designed and built and paid for by the German Third Reich government. Their reason for being was to showcase German superiority to the world.

After the war, an upstart little company grew out of the ashes of war torn Germany. In 1948 this firm produced a humble little 40 horsepower sports car. It was their owner's and chief designer's 356th design exercise. True, the first Porsche 356 had the soul of a Volkswagen Beetle, but today these cars are highly coveted by collectors around the world, and the early Porsche race cars based on them are worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. Porsches have soul, big time.

All the early British and Italian sports cars of the fifties have a great deal of soul. Why? For many reasons, some having to do with aesthetics mixed with quirkiness. Take the MGs,for instance. Even though the 1949 MGTC, 1952 MGTD and 1955 MGTF were post-war cars, they were designed in the 1930s, and never changed. They were the original retro cars, predating the Miata!

The post 1949 Jaguars and Alfa-Romeo models are soul brothers simply because they were all beautiful automobiles. Even though Italian automotive design was so different from the British offerings, it's amazing that these automobiles have stood the test of time so well. To this day, if a '49 Jaguar XK-120 roadster stirs the soul, you can imagine the impact of a "C" or "D" Jaguar racing car. To me, these sensuous Jaguar racers have seemed land based recreations of the British Supermarine Spitfire fighter planes. Now that's soul. The Italian Alfas were beauty for the masses. Designed by the world's leading automotive artists, like PininFarina and Bertone, they were affordable garage art. To this day, I believe the most provocative and beautiful cars designed in the '50s were the Bertone "BAT" series of concept cars based on Alfa Romeo chassis. If you ever have a chance to see these cars in person, or even together in pictures, take it from me, it's a religious experience.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears regularly on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at remsenburg@aol.com

ART COMMENTARY

PEABODY AND FOSS AT CLARK FINE ART

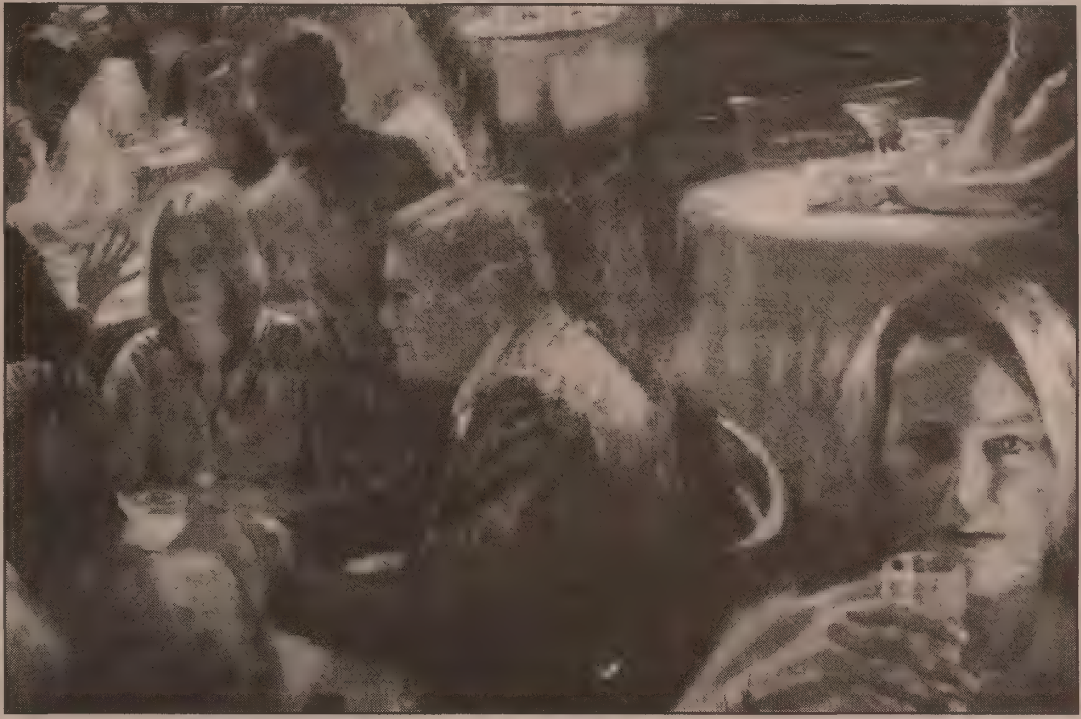
While paintings by Louise Peabody and Cornelia Foss at Southampton's Clark Fine Art Gallery are disparate in subject matter and style, their spatial differences are most intriguing to this critic.

The most obvious variation is the expanding space apparent in Ms. Foss' landscapes where fields meet the sky versus the intimate, often claustrophobic space of Ms. Peabody's nudes and "party scene." These uses may result from a technical, aesthetic consideration or from a thematic one. We're not sure which reason was operating; perhaps both were. One thing is certain, however: form and theme are connected as this column has tried to demonstrate via several previous critiques.

Considering form, there are two kinds of space perceived in the artists' works. Deep and/or infinite space is ultimately employed by Ms. Foss in an unusual way. While the land and water seem flat and shallow at first glance, they also move continuously in the far distances, rolling on into infinity.

Regarding thematic implications, it's obvious that Ms. Foss' works celebrate the landscape and the freedom that they evoke, both in the viewer and the artist alike. Thus, the deep space allows us to travel with Ms. Foss in her exploration of that freedom.

Contrarily, shallow space is employed by Ms. Peabody who keeps some of the qualities of deep space but relates it to the picture plane. Such awareness of the picture surface often limits the compositional space, and that is what gives the artist's works their appeal, among other things. This limitation can be compared to the restricted space of a box or stage.



Louise Peabody's "Saturday Night"

And yet, like Ms. Foss' landscapes, space is expanded. In Ms. Peabody's case, although the limited space should stop the spectator from speculating about the subjects, it does not. An obvious "story" is going on that exists beyond the picture plane; it's in effect taking place "off- screen" (to use a film term). We want to know more about the foreground and background blonde women in the party scene and the various nude female figures in Ms. Peabody's other works.

That limited space conveys a theme of restriction, with the chance that a more liberating life exists beyond what we can see.

The show at Clark Fine Art Gallery will be on view until June 16.

HONORING THE ARTIST: THOM MONTANARI

This week's cover for the Concourse d' Elegance and Hamptons Auto Classic, "Vineyard Roadster," is not only a labor of love for its artist Thom Montanari, but also captures the spirit of the featured automobile. It's a Jaguar XK-120, and according to Mr. Montanari, a "timeless" car.

Art
Show

What makes it so appropriate for the upcoming event, however, is positioning the car in a vineyard setting at the Wolffer Estates. "This associates the elegance of the machine with wine," explains Mr. Montanari.

But we can't help but wonder what makes this car so special. Mr. Montanari continues. "It's the graceful line of the car which never goes out of style. In fact, a car can be seen as a 'rolling sculpture.' Looking at it involves you so you can almost feel the wind in your hair as you speed down the road."

It's not only style that makes this car distinct, but also its history: it was the winner of three consecutive Alpine Rallies. "The car's license is a giveaway to its prominence," says Mr. Montanari, citing the famous identification, MUB 120.

Such enthusiasm for cars is apparent after talking with the artist for even a few minutes. Mr. Montanari himself is the proud owner of a vintage BMW, recalling that his father used to take him to antique auto shows when he was very young.

Mr. Montanari's profession also kept him involved with cars. "I have been a freelance illustrator since 1981," he notes, "some of my accounts being BMW and Mercedes of North America. I was the featured artist for special events like the Pittsburgh Vintage Grand Prix, which I'm really proud of."

Mr. Montanari is looking forward to this week's auto event where his original cover painting will be auctioned off. "The Hamptons Auto Classic consists of two parts," he explains. "Part one is the auto auction on June 7 and 8. The second part, the Concourse d' Elegance, takes place on Sunday, June 8. And the art exhibition on the grounds at Snake Hollow Road, is on the whole weekend."

While there's certainly a lot to look forward to at this event, we must ask a final question. Why all the interest in vintage cars and/or collecting automobiles? Mr. Montanari supplies the answer: "Some people want to have cars to show; they're like trophys. And some just like to participate in rallies, particularly vintage racing events. It's the thrill of competition that turns them on."

ENTERTAINMENT IN THE HAMPTONS

Take Five 2002

with Jan Silver

NOTE: Due to lack of coordination, many worthy nonprofit organizations have all chosen this weekend to hold their benefits. I fear attendance at these well-planned events will be off and I beg some enterprising soul to start an East End Calendar Clearinghouse so that such important fund-raising events will not conflict.

The major events this weekend: the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance classic auto show, sale and benefit for South Fork Breast Health Coalition (Bridgehampton), Field Day Concert (Riverhead), Garden Gala for the Body Positive (East Hampton), Heart of the Hamptons for American Heart Association (Water Mill), Planned Parenthood benefit (Southampton), Latin Fiesta for The Retreat (Wainscott), Pig Roast for East End Hospice (Pindar Vineyards, Peconic), Caribbean Carnival (Bridgehampton), CMEE Circus (Wainscott), Decorators-Designers-Dealers Sale for Southampton Fresh Air Home (Southampton), Parrish Art Museum's Augustus St.-Gaudens exhibition opening (Southampton).

As for pure entertainment, there is good theater on four East End stages Bay Street Theater previews its new show on Tues., the Lighthouse Dance Project performs at Guild Hall (East Hampton), there are several musical performers and interesting speakers, plus Arrested Development play Amagansett's Talkhouse on Sunday night. Here are some details but please check Dan's Papers "Day-by-Day" calendar for additional information:

THEATER

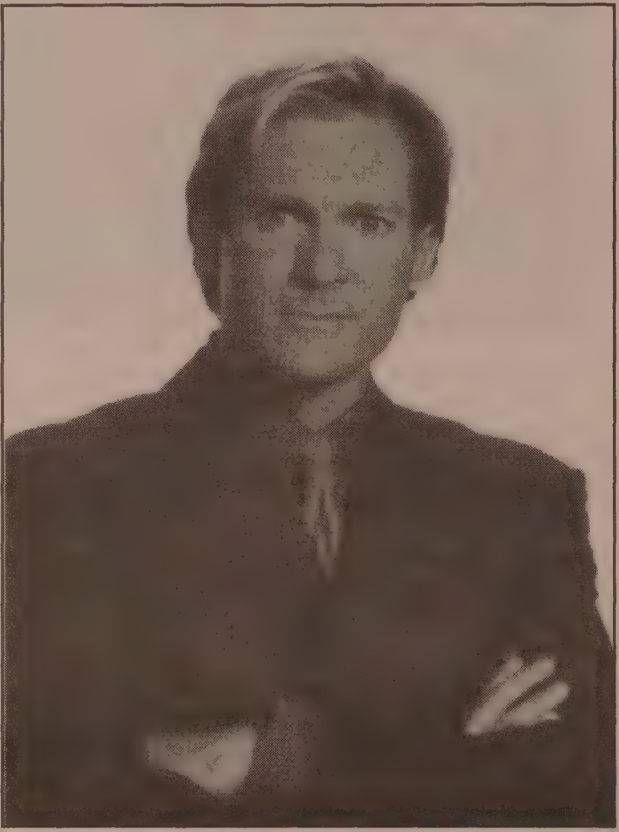
The Southampton Players, Southampton College's theater troupe, debuts its production of the "notorious" musical Best Little Whorehouse in Texas on Friday in the College's Avram Theater. Performances are Friday & Sat. eves at 8 p.m., Sun. at 5 p.m. through June 22. Tickets are $15 ($10 for students and seniors) at the box office 631-287-8899.

Hampton Theater Company's production of Death-Defying Acts, three one-act comedies from Woody Allen, Elaine May and David Mamet (reviewed in this issue), continues at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Thursdays through Sundays. Call the WHBPAC box office at 631-288-2500 or log onto www.whbpac.org to purchase tickets.

Bellport's Gateway Playhouse offers its professional production of Rogers & Hammerstein's musical classic Oklahoma!, with Erica Piccininni (Laurey) and Matt Nall (Curley), on Tuesdays through Sundays until June 14. For tickets, call the box office at 631-286-1133.

Geoffrey Gordon's one-act play Testiculations, a comic drama about the playwright's experiences teaching in a maximum-security prison, will be performed on Friday and Saturday, 6 p.m., in the Senior Building Lecture Hall at the Ross School, Goodfriend Park, East Hampton. Tickets are $8 for adults, $5 for students and seniors; call 631-907-5555 to reserve a seat.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theater begins previews of its next mainstage production, Harold Pinter's The Lover and Arthur Schnitzler's Bacchanalia with Broadway actors John Glover, Sally Murphy, Ted Schneider and John Beuscher, on Tuesday, June 10. The first performance is "Pay-what-you-can" night for tickets purchased at the box office; tickets for all other performances are $38-42. Showtimes are Tues. through Sunday eves plus a 5 p.m. Sat. matinee; call 631-725-9500 or visit the website www.baystreet.org.



Weatherman Sam Champion will be honored at the Garden Gala in East Hampton on Saturday night.

MUSIC AND DANCE

The Lighthouse Dance Project, young dancers who study with East End professionals, will perform ballet, tap, step and hip-hop in a show called "Dance!!!" at East Hampton's John Drew Theater (Guild Hall) on Saturday and Sunday, 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. For tickets ($12), call 631-329-0888.

Shelter Island Friends of Music present chamber music group Strata in concert at Shelter Island's Presbyterian Church, Rte. 114, on Saturday at 8 p.m. (631-749-1488), and Mark Yodice will play classical guitar at the Morris Meeting Room, Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library on Sunday at 3 p.m.

SPEAKERS

There are a host of interesting speakers here this week, and there is no charge for most talks but seating is often limited. Dr. Michele Zerah will speak about acupuncture at noon Friday at Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library (reserve a seat at 283-0774 x 523). Popular local writer and farmer Marilee Foster will read from her well-received book Dirt Under My Fingernails on Friday, 7:30 p.m., at the Southampton Historical Museum (call 283-2494 to reserve a seat).

Acclaimed author Francine Prose will read from her new book Sicilian Odyssey at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 6 p.m. Laura Weisberg, author of the controversial bestseller The Devil Wears Prada, will be at BookHampton, East Hampton on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. The local chapter of the U.S. Power Squadron invites all boaters to a talk and demonstration about boating safety in our local waters on Sunday, 3 p.m., at Sag Harbor's Long Wharf .

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

There are so many benefits this weekend, as listed in the second paragraph of this column, that I am referring anyone interested in attending to read the details in this issue's "Day-by-Day" calendar and then call the number given for the event to see if tickets are still available. Many tickets are sold at the door the day of the event.

Southampton's Parrish Art Museum opens its exhibit "Augustus St.-Gaudens: American Sculptor of the Guilded Age" on Saturday from 2 to 4:30 p.m. There will be a discussion and slide show about the sculptor by a panel of scholars in the Museum's auditorium from 5 to 7 p.m. (free to Museum members, $10 for guests).

Other interesting places to visit on the East End for the next few months: Bridge Gardens Trust, 36 Mitchell Lane, Bridgehampton is open to visitors on Wednesdays and Saturdays ($10) through September. The Shinnecock Nation's Cultural Center and Museum is open Sat. (11-4) and Sun. (1-5) with its permanent exhibit of our local Native Americans art, artifacts and history ($5 adults, $3 children and seniors). Children's Museum of the East End's (CMEE) Museum-without-walls (presents a circus this Saturday).

Saturday Night, And Mom And Dad Are Going Out

Plan on leaving the kids home Saturday night? Stop pestering the sixteen-year-old across the street and turn to professionals for your child-care needs.

Absolute Best Care, Inc., a premier, licensed agency specializing in placing qualified baby nurses, nannies, elderly-care companions, and housekeepers with families, has opened a new office in Manhattan. Combined with its central New Jersey location, the Midtown office now enables Absolute Best Care to expand its services to include families in the Hamptons.

"Absolute Best Care continues to receive tremendously positive feedback among families in New Jersey regarding our specialized care placement services," said company president Douglas Kozinn. "By opening a New York office, we are effectively responding to increasing customer demands in the metropolitan area for the highest-quality professionals to care for the most treasured people in their lives."

Providing services year round, Absolute Best Care has partnered with a renowned hospital to create an in-depth full certificate training course for its Baby Nurses and Nannies. Absolute Best Care aims to match families with caregivers who are highly qualifies, capable, warm, loving, and sensitive to the needs of children and the eldery. BAY STREET THEATRE

THE LOVER & BACCHANALIA
By Harold Pinter By Arthur Schnitzler
Directed by Daniel Gerroll, BACCHANALIA translated by Eugene Brogyanyi
JUNE 10 - 29, 2003
Lies, betrayal, deceit... three elements, two plays, one voyeuristic journey into relationships and the humorous complexity of life and love. BACCHANALIA makes a mischievous partner for the evening... the repercussions of one simple night of unrestricted freedom prove "how paradoxical life can be".

BLESSING OF THE FLEET

OH BROTHER
MONTAUK, NY

This annual event is a popular one for boat and fishing fans alike. On Sunday, at 5:00 p.m., a plethora of commercial fishermen, charter boats, and their friends gather in the Montauk Harbor at the end of West Lake Drive. Father Peter Libasci of St. Therese's Roman Catholic Church, Reverend Jim Best of the Montauk Community Church, Father Alex Karloutsos of the Greek Orthodox Church of the Hamptons, and Cantor Deborah Stein from the Jewish Center of the Hamptons will individually bless the entire fleet of ships, before everyone breaks out in celebration. There will also be they laying of memorial wreaths in the water for those who were lost at sea.

Dracula: Pages From A Virgin's Diary

Since the inception of film, almost all movies have waltzed around reality. Film is, after all, larger than life entertainment. Projection alone takes it out of the norm. I'll always remember the first time I saw my name on a movie house screen. In caps and lower case, it was about a mile wide. A star's name on a theatre marquee cannot come close to this stretch of the mind. And, too, the projector's shutter action makes the image dance. Its nearly imperceptible movement enthralls you in its sway, the way dancers have held audiences for centuries. For dance or movie lovers, it can not be denied that these arts have the weaving eroticism of courtship.

A blatantly creative film flutters audaciously with that flickering sexiness. It is Guy Madden's elegant fantasy, a highly textural rendering of Bram Stoker's, Dracula. Subtitled, Pages From a Virgin's Diary, his film adaptation hovers menacingly over dancer-actor Tara Birtwhistles' Lucy and her seduction, infection, recovery and final death and resurrection perpetrated with overwhelming charisma by actor and grandly entrancing ballet aesthete, Zhang Wei Qiang's Dracula. Director Madden has fashioned his film in expressionist silent film melodrama style, melded with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet's stage production and the result is a smashingly intense mix of the past: the F.W. Murnau, Nesferatu and a post modern view of the cross-carrying, bible-thumping, card-carrying crusaders/anti evildoers who take on the same blood-thirsty quest, in this case, for cleansing the world of anyone not as Lily White puritanical as themselves.

You will have to see for yourself how this film transforms a late 19th century horror legend of depravity into a memorably sexy expression of experimental art and entertainment and thought.

Down With Love

The tantalizing trips of the light fantastic that can ignite the screen or a love affair are reduced to a song and dance in the colorful rear view mirror look at the tease and tempt Rock Hudson\\Doris Day romantic comedies of the early 60's. Down With Love, is a rather thoughtless comedy that spoofs the censor made innocence of those charmers. Without thought the movie is more poof than spoof. More time's been given to retro style and costuming so, if you are into that you can O.D. on it. When I say O.D., I don't mean olive drab. I mean spectrum blowing color and, though Renee Zellweger and Ewan McGregor are neatly colorful as well, they're no Doris or Rock. The remake is not hindered by cobwebbed codes so, it makes obvious the fact that the screenwriters and Rock and Doris could be more adroitly funny and sexy with their hands tied and, one foot firmly flat on the floor.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award-wining European and American feature films. He has been a judge at major Film and TV award competitions, including the Oscars, the Emmy's and various film festivals. He is assisted by Sarah Halsey.

ED KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

The Italian Job (+)

This movie could have been much better if it had not tried to pack an enormous amount of energy into each frame. Nevertheless, it does have some really fine caper material, particularly during the first 15 minutes.

There are two chase scenes: one by boat in the canals of Venice, and the other in LA using cars and electronic tinkering that cause huge traffic jams. Three little BMW Mini Coopers perform almost circus-like tricks, and a helicopter that hovers over traffic is operated as though it were in a Japanese computer game.

The caper starts in Venice with a small gang led by Charlie (Mark Wahlberg), the safecracker John (Donald Sutherland) and John's daughter Stella (Charlize Theron), who is living in New York City. Stella is honest but has her father's talented, safe-cracking fingers. Steve (Ed Norton) is the evil guy. You learn that early on, so I'm not giving anything away. There are three additional gang members: Left- Ear (Mos Def), an expert on dynamite; Rob (Jason Statham), a handsome, super driver; and Wrench (Frankie G), an electronic genius. A limited very discrete romance exists between Charlie and Stella. The acting on the part of all was acceptable, but no more than that.

The caper to steal $37 million in Italian gold is lots of fun. After it is stolen, a double-cross takes place, and the gang sets out to track down Steve in LA and do him in. They then become engaged in seeking to retrieve the gold bars from Steve's possession and that involves a complicated caper. The director got carried away with the script and let it get out of hand. All the excitement and suspense you would expect exits the film.

The introduction of a Ukrainian crime lord in LA gave some added interest to the film, but nothing that happened came near to equaling the first 15 minutes. The film is, however, far better than 85 percent of the films released during the last three weeks.

Before Ed Koch was a film critic for Dan's Papers he was the Mayor of New York.

theatre review: death defying acts

The current offering at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center is Hampton Theatre Company's production of Death Defying Acts under the direction of Diana Marbury. Three engaging, amusing one act plays are performed: David Mamet's An Interview, Elaine May's Hotline and Woody Allen's Central Park West, contrasting the style and wit of each playwright. Comedy always arises in spite of the adverse circumstances in which the characters find themselves.

Cast in these roles are actors very well suited to meet the comedic challenge. Andrew Botsford, a very convincing, somewhat shady lawyer arguing his eternal fate in the David Mamet play also plays Sam in the Woody Allen comedy, requiring a complete change of personality and delivery. Joseph DeSane, reminiscent of Kevin Klein, is the probing, controlled Attendant of Hell's portal opposite Mr. Botsford in the Mamet piece, then he is thrust into the role of the nervous Ken, the neophyte hotline volunteer, talking down the suicidal callers in Elaine May's Hotline. Helen Mendes is a hoot in Hotline, proving her persona, timing, delivery and postures as Dorothy, the impoverished suicidal hooker. The interplay between Phyllis, played by Diana Marbury and Carol, played by Garrett McConnell in Central Park West is timed, tuned, hilarious and worth another visit to WHB PAC. Molly Jade as Juliet is strikingly beautiful and cleverly cast as the surprise ingénue/love interest.

Intermittent laughter from the audience punctuated the clever exchanges in The Interview, increasing during Hotline and building to a crescendo by the time Woody Allen's piece was staged. The sets by Peter Marbury also began simply. For the first play a table and two chairs were placed in front of the curtain for the two actors with lighting outlining an oblique window to empower the drama and to create an illusion of depth. Then the curtain opened to reveal the Hotline split set, a simple apartment to the left and a suicide hotline center to the right with a table, chair and telephone, darkened during the action in the apartment. The set for the third comedy, Central Park West, was elegantly appointed with jewel tones and sumptuous furnishings, a crystal chandelier, artwork and wall sconces.

The actors have responded gamely to each very different approach from the scripts. While David Mamet's complicated dialogue requires rapt attention to follow the intricacies of the inquisition presented, Elaine May's characters provide a chance to relax, laugh and ease into the action. Woody Allen's book stands out as a giant in Lilliput in terms of comedic genius; his play had to come third since no one could follow an act like his. Even after the flow is interrupted between the first two plays and the third by a 15-minute intermission, with walks to the refreshment counter and re-seating, the contrast in comedy is very apparent with Central Park West as the gemstone in the setting. Out come the funny Freudian allusions, innuendos, plot twists and surprises as each of the characters banters it out, to find that his or her love interest has someone else.

The costumes by Teresa LeBrun are well suited for each character to be believable, especially the hooker in the second piece, whose attributes are in constant danger of peeking over the precipice. Eric Schlobohm's lighting enhanced the scenes and helped the audience to focus on the action in the Hotline. The Hampton Theatre Company has once again produced an exceptionally entertaining, well-directed evening in this remarkable facility on the East End.

Setting The Stage For Massage Therapy

Atmosphere, music on the right notes, setting the stage for the massage will benefit the person getting the massage as well as the person giving it. It is important to allow time enough for the massage. Time for the after glow is just as important. Hopefully the need to just jump off the table after the massage will be avoided. Let the benefits of the massage take its course. Time is really important, for the person giving the massage not to feel rushed and the person getting the massage to feel relaxed and comfortable with a clear head. Allow all the agendas to be put in the back pockets at this time. Try not to schedule anything before the massage, so the person giving the massage is relaxed and calm and the person receiving the massage can enjoy the lasting affects of the oils, and general good feeling.

Creating the right atmosphere is all part of the therapy. A warm, quiet room, fireplace going if available, soft lighting will help the person receiving closes their eyes comfortably, or an aromatherapy mask will help. Doing the massage in a place that is pleasing to the eye will help the person giving the massage as well when thoughts seem to wander a bit. Plenty of room for moving around is helpful. If possible, no sounds from outside should come in. Listening to music that will comfort no words for excess thoughts, at the right sound level. Ask the person receiving the massage his or her preferences as to the type of music preferred. This could also include sounds of the sea, or rain, or just plain quiet. Asking questions is very empowering to the receiver, listening will be even more empowering.

Positioning for the most comfort. Pillows for bolstering under the knees will help very much for lower backaches. Soft pillows under the neck will help for those with headaches or blood pressure issues and sometimes it just feels better to have a pillow under the head when lying down. Lots of space for the person to work without feeling they are going to bump into something, or knock something over like a lamp, or vase. And keep the oils near by. Remember where they were placed is important to maintain the fluidity of the massage, usually placing the oils on the table or by the feet works for me. When working on the upper parts of the body, be aware of your breath. It can be uncomfortable when lying on the table to be breathed upon. Again, this is all just personal awareness.

A nice cozy temperature is necessary. Blankets for the person receiving the massage, or if in hot months a soft sheet or soft towel feels nice. Ask questions, and see if the person you are giving a massage to is comfortable, or if they need some extra bolstering. When using an electric blanket, check the temps often. This can get uncomfortable when the person on the massage table turns over as well, so ask.

Let's get cozy ourselves because it's important for the person giving the massage to be very relaxed and peaceful. A small meditation or mantra works on occasion. Just take a minute or two to get relaxed and calm before the massage begins because the person on the table will feel where you are coming from right through your hands. It happens every time, so this is really important. Bring your shoulders down, a few deep breaths will also help the person receiving. A deep breath sometimes is quite contagious and can help with the massage for both people. Muscles do relax when proper oxygen is distributed throughout the system. Comfortable clothing for the person giving the massage is as important as for the person getting the massage. Barefoot or really comfortable shoes will do too. Long sleeves is not recommended and clothing that will be subject to different oils need be considered. Watch the fingernails, and fragrances. Sometimes when getting this close, fragrances can be overwhelming or cause an allergic reaction.

Understanding the patient, questions and answers, listening with the fingers, People in general love to be 'heard'. And most of the time, like to talk about themselves and their own boo boos. The more we touch, and to achieve a really nice application of a massage, learning how to 'listen' with the fingers will be the greatest achievement you can imagine. Listen with your ears to what the person really wants to be made to feel better, remember it, because when your hands get there, you will really know and feel. Ask about pressure and sensitive areas, some people don't like the feet touched.

Sometimes you will find that the areas we touch can be sensitive. Often the feet or the head are the most sensitive areas. We learned while studying infant massage this could be a sign of a traumatic birth. You will find people to be tickle-ish or shy for some areas to be touched. We must honor these wishes. A prior accident or history may be in there past so; we need to respect all these wishes. I once worked on a psychic that did not want me to work on her head and she suffered from migraines! We learn to work around these things, listen with the ears and most of all listen with the hands. Fingertip pressure can make all the difference. Pressures vary with all the fingers. We have generally more strength in the pointer finger than in the pinky. The middle finger is the most easily used because it is more neutral. The pressure seems to be the correct pressure most of the time with the middle finger. In acupuncture, the middle finger represents the channel that protects the heart. Good one to use, whereas the pointer finger begins the colon channel, not so widely recommended –Kathy Abugel

Just The Right Care For Your Curly Hair

As you know, I do lot's of shopping and I am always trying new products that come out on the market. A new one I just tried, and really like is Batia & Aleeza Hair-Care from the Batia and Aleeza Salon in Beverly Hills. It has made its debut here in the Hamptons.

After years of development, creators Batia ,and Aleeza, who by the way are sisters, found the right combination of the finest natural botanical ingredients and marine proteins to immediately improve the quality of curly, wavy and frizzy hair types.

Batia and Aleeza released their signature line of hair care products in 2000. What a way to start the millennium...The all-natural shampoo, conditioner and styling gel combine to firm the perfection equation to achieve attractive and beautiful hair. After years of development, Batia and Aleeza found the right combo of the finest natural botanical ingredients and marine proteins to immediately improve the quality of curly, wavy and frizzy hair types. Some of their customers that use this product are Michael Bay, Nancy Travis, Amy Irving, Britney Spears, Steven Spielberg, Ralph Macchio, Alicia Silverstone to name a few.

The line includes Bio-Natural Shampoo ($14.95), Bio-Protein Conditioner ($14.95) and Bio-Herbal Mineral Sculpting Gel ($14.95). Each product is made with plant and herb derived ingredients that immediately improve wavy, curly and frizzy hair types.

This dynamic all-natural care trio for curly hair is the solution for getting perfect, luxurious curly hair that is free of frizz, full of shine and alive with healthy volume. Used together, the trio is all your hair needs to be protected from the sun, safe from the depleting effects of humidity and fully nourishes and enriches your hair. The line enriches hair with vitamins and proteins which are extracted from plants and herbs.

The Bio-Natural Shampoo is a gentle cleanser made from plant minerals that nourishes and cleanses without stripping your hair of color or essential oils. It contains a natural cleanser containing only the purest botanical extracts of flowers, trees and plants. It is a mild shampoo that is super enriched with Vitamins A, D and E to strengthen and rejuvenate hair leaving it free, silky, full of body and more manageable with every use. It is also save for permed or color treated hair.

The Bio-Protein Conditioner is a sixty-second deep conditioner that is fortified with triple proteins for complete hair nutrition. Made with Aloe Vera, Ginseng, Gotu Kola and many other botanical extracts. It infuses hair with free radical reducing anti-oxidants, amino acids, proteins and vitamins. The all-natural ingredients ensure that the hair is healthy, manageable and moisturized.

The Bio-Herbal Mineral Sculpting Gel (dubbed The Magic Gel" by InStyle Magazine uses a formula created with herbs, minerals and vegetable proteins for a long lasting set. Its unique and natural ingredients enhances naturally curly or wavy hair, contributes body, increases shine, reduces frizzies, prevents fly-away in windy conditions and protects your hair against salt, chlorine, air pollution as well as UV-A and UV-Radiation. What I particularly like about the gel is that it can be used with blow dryers, brushes, hot irons, hot or cold rollers, pins and other styling options.

Each product is engineered with all natural, organic materials blended with moisturizers to enhance your hair and soothe your scalp. And...every product (which is really important) is animal friendly; there was absolutely no testing on animals used to develop these products.

If you have that wavy or curly hair, the curl enhancing ingredients of the the Bio-Herbal Mineral Sculpting Gel will spring your curls back to life! Your hair will love you for it.

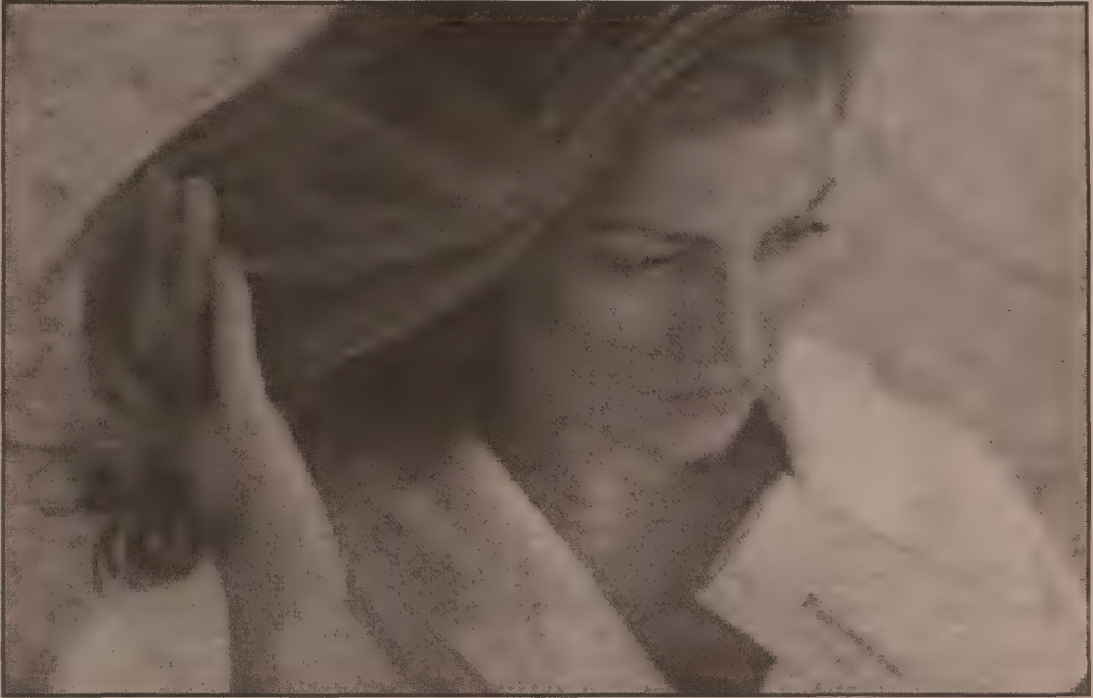
HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face.....with Annette



This has got to be the worst spring that we have had in a long time weather wise. Humidity is the key word of the day lately! I feel like someone picked up the tri-state area and dumped us in Seattle. Hair is starting to look like it too! This is a real test to see if you have the frizzies or if the product you do use for it is working! Light shampoos are only going to make the hair frizz more so when you choose your shampoo and conditioner, make sure sleek and smooth are among the words on the bottle. Pantene's Sleek and Smooth shampoo and conditioner are two good examples of the kind of products you should be using. Any kind of body conditioner (not the greasy kind) or body spray lightly rubbed between your fingers then through your hair should help tame them. Nivea Body Spray is great for this. Pick up products that contain silicone. And during the day.. try not to use a brush on your hair.. a wide tooth comb will keep the frizzies at bay better.

Hair sprays also can be more of a hindrance than a help. They will tend to get sticky and gummy in this weather so if you can forgo them.. do so. A hairstyle that is up and not hanging straight, if frizzies are your norm, is the best way to get around all of it. Another tip to remember.. your hair dryer is creating just the environment don't want. The hot heat that blasts out of the dryer towards your hair is setting you up for the dreaded frizz. Try the new Ionic Blow dryers that you can pickup wherever blowers are sold. They are far more gentle on your hair as they create negative ions reducing static and the frizzies.

And if all the above fails... there are some real cute baseball caps out here that aren't only for the boys!

Estee Lauder promises hyper gleam with their new Pure Color Lip Vinyl. Beyond gloss it can be used alone or over lipstick creating a new mix of hot, chic, shocking color! $20 at Macy's. To go along with it try Long Lasting Lipstick, $22, in new vinyl-ized shades. You free gift with your purchase of $25 or more is a chic little bag, including Pure Color Nail Lacquer in Rose Candy, new Pure Color Lip Vinyl lip gloss in Plastique Pink and Wet Rose, a lip applicator, Pure Color Long Lasting Lipstick in Naive Rose, new Artist's Lip Pencil, Resilience Lift Face and Throat Creme. All this in a great canvas travel bag.

Did Dad Know?

Father's Day, 3rd Sunday in June. The idea for creating a day for children to honor their fathers began in Spokane, Washington. A woman by the name of Sonora Smart Dodd thought of the idea for Father's Day while listening to a Mother's Day sermon in 1909.

Having been raised by her father, Henry Jackson Smart, after her mother died, Sonora wanted her father to know how special he was to her. It was her father that made all the parental sacrifices and was, in the eyes of his daughter, a courageous, selfless, and loving man. Sonora's father was born in June, so she chose to hold the first Father's Day celebration in Spokane,Washington on the 19th of June, 1910.

In 1924 President Calvin Coolidge proclaimed the third Sunday in June as Father's Day. Roses are the Father's Day flowers: red to be worn for a living father and white if the father has died. In case you didn't know all this, you do now.

How about doing something for Dad in addition to a gift? Cleaning out his garage would be one welcome gesture, or cutting the lawn. Make him his favorite dinner, or treat. Take him to his favorite restaurant. If your dad is into computers, how about some great new games? A new DVD or VHS would be welcome. Gift certificates to Amazon.com or Barnes and Noble online is thoughtful. Auto Accessories or some new cologne. Over at redenvelope.com you are sure to pick up some wonderful ideas as well. A leather sunglass case selling for $75 may be what he could use for the summer to hold all his lenses. A beautiful white monogrammed robe for $58-70 is an idea. Cool nickname boxer shorts for $25-30 can be purchased at red envelope as well.

At Macy's Polo Ralph Lauren Blue is having a sale. A $67.50 value for just $52.50. A 4.2 oz Eau de Toilette Spray and 2.6 oz Alcohol-Free Deodorant. Perfect for summer!

If your dad is into Corvettes, Lord & Taylor is cornering the market on Corvette items. Celebrating Corvettes 50th Anniversary, they have lots of things you can get for him. Corvette baseball caps for $17. Corvette Travel mug for $8.99. Corvette pique polo shirt in white cotton, sizes s to xl, $65. Buzz over or go to www.lordandtaylor.com.

Happy Father's Day

Do It Yourself Clambake

At Kurt Vonnegut's Clambake in 2001, a Timequake struck and everything flicked back to 1996. That was fictional of course, or was it. I could swear I wrote this somewhere before.

A clambake is an old New England tradition. Today it tends to be a big, all out party, but it started out as a commercial enterprise, where New Englanders put together these big blasts for wealthy tourists, according to archeologist Kathy Neustadt, in her book Clambake: A History and Celebration Of An American Tradition. Today, it is more of a "glorified revival of a timeless custom."

A clambake is kind of like a barbecue in principle, though not all in practice. Traditionally, you should hold a clambake on the beach with a big bonfire and lots of people. Of course, I don't think the local authorities will be too happy if everyone is strolling onto the beach and lighting up fires, so that idea is probably out. Still, Hamptonians are probably closer to New Englanders in tradition than Manhattanites, so a clambake is something of a tradition.

Essentially, the clambake is just a beachfront gathering, and end-of-the-summer bash, where everyone eats clams, corn-on-the-cob and other foods including lobsters, mussels or anything with a shell, potatoes and onions cooked in a pit of hot rocks topped with seaweed, each layer of food divided by a layer of seaweed. You could do it inside by steaming all the ingredients in a large pot but that would not really be a clambake. Doing it in your backyard is stretching it. Even Webster's Dictionary defines a clambake as "an outdoor party; especially : a seashore outing where food is usually cooked on heated rocks covered by seaweed."

If you live somewhere in New England, you can probably find a caterer that specializes in clambakes. You can call them in or send them an email and they will put together the whole event for you. All you have to do is send out the invited. But where is the fun in that?

A clambake caterer will likely be more difficult to find out here, even if we do live similar styles of life, though I'm sure there are some who can do it if you want to take the easy way out. A barbecue is sufficient enough for throwing a small clambake in your backyard. It might not be as fun, but the food will still be good. Unfortunately, you should not use a gas or electric grill here. To do it right, you will need a coal one.

There are only a few very basic necessities for the clambake. The first thing you need, other than the barbecue, is, well, the clams, lobsters, corn-on-the-cob or whatever ingredients you choose to use. But that part is easy. You can either pick it up at your local fish market, or even fish for it yourself if you are feeling adventurous. If you are putting on the bonfire, you will also need a shovel to dig the ditch, a metal bucket to hold water and finished coals, and a tarp for covering the pit while the food is steaming.

The toughest thing for you to find might be the seaweed. All seaweed is not the same.

Rockweed is what is used by most old-fashioned New Englanders. You should be able to get it at most "serious" fish stores, otherwise, anything similar will do. The small pockets of saltwater in the seaweed will give off the steam you need for cooking. Put it over the fiery hot coals. The heat from the coals will burst the pockets inside the seaweed, releasing the saltwater steam to not only cook, but Toxic Mold...

Is it making you or a family member sick?

Toxic Mold can cause wheezing, coughing, difficulty breathing, nasal and sinus conditions, reddened, burning eyes, blurry vision, headaches, aches and pains and other problems.

Poor ventilation and leaks in the attic…floods or leaky pipes create a fertile environment for toxic molds. Often these microbes go unseen behind walls, under roofs, over ceilings and in the darkest spots in our basements.

For more than twenty years TechClean Industries has provided mold decontamination services for hospitals, research laboratories, pharmaceutical companies, universities and now – homes like yours.

Dad's In The Kitchen: What's For Dinner?

Dining In: Had A Dad...Who Cooked

A dad who cooks is a year-round present to the mom who doesn't. So this year, leave the ties on the rack (sorry, Jerry Garcia was a fine four-fingered guitarist, but a tie designer... please) and get dad something really special. Let's get the dad who cooks a little something that will bring a smile to his face when he opens it this Father's Day, and an even bigger smile when he uses it all year long. If you said a frilly apron that reads "Kiss the Cook," go to the back of the class.

Show dad how much you appreciate his culinary mastery and gift him with the cutlery equivalent of a diamond tennis bracelet. The deluxe Zwilling J.A. Henckels seven-piece knife set including four-inch paring, six-inch utility, eight-inch bread, eight-inch carving, eight-inch chef's, sharpening steel and hardwood storage block is all the slicing, dicing, carving and chopping power dad may ever need. The knives are among the world's best, featuring solid stainless-steel construction, ergonomic handles, Fridour ice hardened blades and laser-controlled edges. All this is a fancy way of saying that they start out really sharp, stay really sharp and will last a lifetime. The set usually sells for $700, but can be found at Hildreth's in Southampton for $499.99. A smaller three-piece set is also available for $229.99. You will know if this is the right gift for the dad on your gift-list if he never misses an episode The Iron-Chef and is attempting to recreate Kitchen Stadium in his kitchen. If you live in one of the deprived areas on the East-End that is served by Cablevision which does not carry The Food Network thereby completely depriving dad of The Iron Chef, the number one item on your list should be Direct-TV.

Lucas Hunt at BookHampton in Southampton was certain that cooking dads were a throwback to the primal male urge to provide food for the family, and suggested that this is why dads making grunting sounds while, say, filleting. Lucas went on to expound on man's struggle to control his surroundings, the unconquerable dilemma of male-female relationships and the solipsistic nature of reality, but not before he recommended two excellent books for the dad who cooks.

Mario Batali's The Babbo Cookbook detail some of the recipes from the celebrity chef's legendary Manhattan eatery with the uncommon blend of his typical creativity and allegiance to tradition. Batali is one chef known for teaching an old dog new tricks, or perking up old recipes. As we swing into prime lobster season, this summer, dad will prize Babbo's recipe for "Montauk Lobster Salad."

Perhaps a point in support of Lucas Hunt's theories on primal urges, most dads seem to enjoy the ritual of the barbecue. Give dad a leg up on the rest of the grill and charcoal set by giving him the new barbecue cookbook Let the Flames Begin by Eric Schlesinger and John Willouby. The only thing this book has in common with most other barbecue books is the hokey title. This is a real cookbook, a step or two beyond ordinary grill books.

If dad's taste's run more Miller than Moet, The Beercan Chicken cookbook by Stephen Raichlen might be just the thing. This book features, of course, the recipe and preparation instructions for the famous Beercan Chicken as well as 74 other recipes for variations, accompaniments and like-minded meals.

Rainy Days: Fighting The Fungus

The damp cool weather we've been experiencing these last few weeks provides the perfect condition for many fungal organisms to be active in our landscapes. Fungal spores are splashed from the soil or airborn, landing on a susceptible leaf, flower or other plant tissue. Several weeks to a month later the damage is usually visible. Fungicides need to be applied preventatively in order to treat the fungal diseases successfully. They should be applied on a dry day with no rain forcasted for a couple of days.. these days this is a problem. There is usually a repeat application 10 days later.

Adequate spacing is essential between plants to prevent disease. Roses and other small plants should be about 3 ft. apart. Give larger shrubs more room, at least 5 ft. in between. Good air circulation is important.

Not much can be done for root rot or browning. Too much water is the culprit so all that can be hoped for is some drier weather. There is no soil treatment for root diseases. As with all your stressed plants, pay particular attention to them later on in the season during dry spells. Fungus can also be spread from one lawn to another on shoes and equipment. Treating funus in the lawn can be expensive, so prevention is the key. Keep your mowers clean and dry. Make sure the blades are sharp.

Keep an eye out on your tomatoes. If they are planted sometime between now and June 15th they will produce a good crop. Don't be surprised if they are a little late this year though. The night temperatures need to be above 55 degrees in order for them to set buds.

All the early spring flowering shrubs that need shaping should be pruned now before they start forming buds for next year. Any tropical flowering plants such as hibiscus and jasmine can be put in a sunny spot outdoors after it has been exposed gradually to bright light for several days. They should be slowly given brighter light on a daily basis, but that has been hard to do with all this cloudy weather we've been experiencing.

Think SUN!!

–Annette Gunnels Garkowski

An essential item for the dad who wants all he can get out his grill is a pizza stone. Pizza stones work wonders on crust, absorbing excess moisture for even baking and a crisper crust. They usually come in 13" or 15" inch diameters, and work fine in a conventional oven, but using them on the grill creates a rich flavor.

If you find that, after opening his gifts Dad is grunting away like an extra on a Tim Allen special, perhaps you can discuss it with Lucas.

Ice cream headaches, also known as brain freezes, are caused by referred pain, which is pain that is felt elsewhere in the body rather than at the afflicted spot. This is similar to the pain that is sometimes felt in the left arm when a person is suffering from a heart attack. Only about thirty percent of the population suffers from ice cream headaches and the pain is usually located in the "midfrontal" region of the brain and lasts anywhere from a few seconds to a few minutes (in extreme cases). As cold substances contact the palate of the mouth the pain is sent to the brain. There is no known cure for the brain freeze and sufferers usually don't seek treatment.

Clambake

flavor your food as well. You can put salt on the seaweed also, but that is a matter of taste.

According to About.com, if you want to do your clambake indoors, pour about one inch of water into a clam steamer or large kettle and divide the seaweed into four equal parts. Place one division in the bottom of the steamer, placing the lobsters on top of the seaweed. Put another layer of seaweed over the lobsters and put on the corn. Cover the corn with the third division of seaweed and put the clams over that, covering the clams with the final layer.

Bring the steamer to a boil over a high flame, covered, and steam for anywhere from thirty to forty five minutes, or until the clam shells have opened wide. Eat your clambake, but leave the seaweed.

Police Blotter

In Amagansett, a resident complained to police about the fireworks being shot off from a nearby house. The complainant said that debris from the incendiaries was landing on his grounds, house and car. When the police arrived they indeed observed fireworks erupting from a house about 200 yards away. When they went to the residence in question, they found two tubes of fireworks set up alongside a pool, while youths continued to ignite them. The owner of the house admitted responsibility for the fireworks and was arrested.

A hot dog truck in Montauk was broken into, soda cans were strewn on the ground, but there was nothing further amiss. It is theorized that a person or persons broke into the truck looking for cash, found none, and left. The owner of the truck was not inclined to pursue the matter.

An American flag, as well as a Montauk flag, were stolen from a flag pole in front of a residence on Kirk Avenue inn Montauk.

Several days later, elsewhere in Montauk, three flags were stolen from behind a house on Soundview Drive. A serial flag pilferer?

Dan's Letters

SAY IT AGAIN, ALL OVER AGAIN
Dear Dan,

Bravo to Jan Silver for her review of NobodyDoesn't Love Yogi. She always writes such insightful, knowledgeable and fair critiques. She is an asset to Dan's Papers, the East End and New York City. I look forward to her articles every week. They are terrific.

CASINO... NO, NO, NO
Dear Dan,

Each year as my family and I spend time on the North and South Forks of Long Island, we are saddened as we see how developers have destroyed yet another tract of forest in order to stuff their wallets. Yet, there is still enough left of Mother Nature's wonders on the East End to look forward to our trips. The Nature Conservancy, The Group For The South Fork, the Shinnecock Indian Nation, and others who love and appreciate the gifts of the natural world have seen to it that these wonders are not bulldozed and paved over. But now it seems that the Shinnecock Indians are proceeding with their plans to build a casino, which would, of course, destroy even more of what is so precious in this region. Besides destroying a pristine seventy-nine acre forest and beach, it would create enormous traffic and pollution problems, as well as create an increase in crime and gambling addiction, and an elimination of the small town and casual pace of Hampton Bays. Even those of us who revere the night sky would no longer be able to contemplate the heavens, because of the light pollution created by a casino and it's parking lot.

In 1854 the Dwamish Chief, Sealth, said:

"Every part of this earth is scared to my people. Every shining pine needle, every sandy shore, every mist in the dark woods, every clearing, and every humming insect is holy in the memory and experience of my people. The sap which courses through the trees carries the memories of the red man... This we know: All things are connected. Whatever befalls the earth befalls the sons of the earth. Man did not weave the web of life; he is merely a strand in it. Whatever he does to the earth he does to himself..."

These words and the words of other Native Americans from the Pacific Coast to the Long Island shores have been an inspiration to many of us to continue to struggle to safeguard the natural world from the greed of developers. There are good people in the region who have been trying to join with the Shinnecock Nation in seeking alternative ways to help the to improve their economic condition. I beg of the Shinnecocks to please work with these people, and to please reconsider their plan to build a casino.

DO YOU DARE TO SHARE?
Dear Dan,

After reading your article about share houses it frightens me. I am one of the stupid ones. After a hell of a year I decided to do a share; I was not aware of all that seems to go on. I did ask questions about the kind of people, the crowding etc. I was told the complete opposite of what looks like would lie ahead. I guess my question is are they going to really be shutting down all the shares? My money is down the tubes either way! But I would really prefer not to be around if raids are going to start.

I like your paper.

WORKING ON OUR WEATHER MACHINE
Dear Dan,

First off, I would like to mention how professional and courteous your people have been in helping get our ad out there. I know that there was one ad that we barely made the deadline, but you stayed on it until it went into print. Again, thanks.

My husband and I decided to sell our home without using a broker. So began the task of advertising. The big question was with whom. We decided on a few local papers. Ran our ad and received no response. Not to mention the web site we created for the sale. That still baffles me. Now that the season has come upon us and the time was right for an ad in Dan's Papers, we started out with a small ad in the real estate section.

We received a few responses from some of the local realtors. Then we decided to go all out and run a full-page ad. Which by the way was very fairly priced. You ran the ad with our text, web site address and open house dates. It came out beautiful in the paper. That day we had a terrible rainstorm but we still had people respond to the ad and they came anyway.

The following week we ran the ad again with another open house, and again rain, rain and more rain. That weekend however, we had an even better response. Those people had come from the Sayville area, the Port Washington area and the Seaford area. All having seen or having someone tell them about or ad in Dan's.

Well we haven't sold our home yet, but we are once again running a full-page ad in Dan's Papers. We are happy with the exposure and responses we are receiving, not to mention the amount of hits we are getting our web site that is mentioned in the ad.

We know that you at Dan's Papers have control over your paper, now do you by any chance have control over the weather?

Jim and Roseann Naples.

Next week will be a sunny weekend. –D.R.

JUST RELAX
Dear Dan,

I wish you would write an article on "Driving in the Hamptons." One of the pleasures of the Hamptons is its leisurely pace. More and more, I notice people flashing their lights and tailgating when you're doing the speed limit, people not stopping for people in the crosswalks and people eager to pass you on sleepy back roads.

Perhaps they should have a re-adjustment booth on the way to the Hamptons, to get people coming form the city to chill out.

Have You heard about the English cottage that just came on the market in the estate section of East Hampton?

My dear, it's absolutely charming! In the heart of Georgia on fabulous property: 2.5 lush acres. A tall garden wall hides it so it's perfectly private. It has two stone fireplaces, stone patios, a pool. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths in the main house and a separate little 1 bedroom cottage tucked away in the rear, completely private to itself for --"those times." Well, one never knows, does one? (And of course you have to make an appointment to see it.) $2,600,000. Folio #94.
